TROTZKY AGREES TO HOLD PARLEY AT BREST-LITOVSK

Negotiations for Peace with Teutons Resumed as Army Prepares to Fight.

PEACE MADE WITH BULGARIA

Fact Announced in Parliament at Sofia by Premier Radoslavoff.

TURKEY'S TERMS REJECTED

German Mission in Petrograd Said to Have Asked Sweden to Mediate with Allies.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 10.—The Russian delegation at Brest-Litovsk has announced its readiness to continue the peace negotiations at that place, the latest information received here says.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Unofficial reports received here concerning the first session of the peace conference at Brest-Litovsk, which was resumed Tuesday with Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Foreign Minister, at the head of the Russian delegates, say that Trotzky, in a speech, insisted on a removal of the conference to Stockholm.

Trotzky declared the Russians came to Brest-Litovsk not as the representatives of a conquered country, and did not intend to ask for pity, but would continue to act as true revolutionists. He is reported to have told the German and Austrian delegates that if they did not accede to his request they would feel the weight of the voice of the democracies of the Central Powers, and the weight of arms of the Russian democracy.

The Evening Post asserts that the Germans replied that they did not decline to carry on the peace negotiations, but they failed to specify where.

The Russian delegation includes, in addition to Trotzky, who is serving as its President, one woman, Mme. Bithenko, a former exile, and M. Joffe, M. Kameneff, M. Pokrovsky, and three counsellors.

The German delegation in Petrograd which is discussing with the Russians such questions as the resumption of commercial relations and the exchange of certain classes of prisoners is reported to have expressed the desire to the Swedish legation that Sweden act as the go-between with Great Britain, France and Italy.

A separate peace agreement has been signed by Russia and Bulgaria, according to the Bund of Berne, a dispatch from the Swiss capital reports. A Bulgarian correspondent of the Bund says Premier Radoslavoff read the following dispatch from Brest-Litovsk in Parliament:

"War between Russia and Bulgaria ceases. Diplomatic and economic relations between Russia and Bulgaria are resumed. Russia recognizes Bulgaria's right to nominate a delegate to an international Danube commission. The first peace is thus concluded, with the consent of Bulgaria's allies."

The Bund says Bulgaria has appointed a Minister to Petrograd and a Consul General to be stationed at Odessa, and has ordered the resumption of navigation to Odessa.

Separate peace proposals made by Turkey have been refused by the Bolshevist Government, according to a report in Petrograd. Turkey was requested to participate in the general conference between Russia and the Central Powers.

A dispatch last Saturday from Petrograd purported to give the Turkish peace terms as presented to Russia, but the dispatch did not state that Turkey's proposals had been made independent of the other Central Powers. Among the terms proposed by Turkey were free passage of the Dardanelles for Russian ships, Russian evacuation of Turkish territory, and demobilization of the Russian Black Sea fleet. Turkey was to retain her active army in consequence of continuation of war against the Entente.

Bulgaria took part with Germany, Austria, and Turkey in the first negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, and it has been assumed that no peace terms would be agreed to by the Central Powers except in concert. However, advices yesterday giving the names of those who took part in the first session of the Brest-Litovsk conferences when they were resumed this week made no mention of a Bulgarian representative.

King Ferdinand of Bulgaria is credited with opposing the formula of peace without annexations or indemnities, declaring Bulgaria should retain the territory she has won. This would not interfere with a peace between Russia and Bulgaria, however, inasmuch as the territory Bulgaria desires consists of parts of Serbia and Rumania.

MILAN, Jan. 10, (Dispatch to London Daily Chronicle.)—When the despotic German censorship is constrained to permit the publication of such a leading article as is printed in a number of the Leipziger Volkszeitung received here tonight, the fact may be interpreted as symptomatic of a maturing crisis in German democratic spheres. Sees Germany Near Collapse, Infected by Russia's Example.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 10.—Germany was never in such danger of collapse from internal and external difficulties as at present, says the correspondent in Germany of the Tijd. The political struggle concentrated around Foreign Secretary von Kühlmann has been reflected, he says, in violent scenes in the Main Committee of the Reichstag. Public action of the Socialist minority cannot longer be resisted, and even should militarism gain a temporary victory, the correspondent thinks that reaction will follow quickly.

Russia's example is said to have infected popular and military circles already. The food question, the national mourning, the dislocation of industry, the growing desire for peace, and the fear of a new offensive in the west threaten to lead to a tragic phase if the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk fail. In the latter event, the correspondent says, a domestic explosion is inevitable.

BOLSHEVISM SEEN AS NEW RELIGION

OUTCOME OF IT FEARED

Partition of the Country Among the Powers Prophesied by One Pessimist.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—The Christmas holidays passed off quietly. The Russians of all classes stubbornly celebrated Christmas, despite snowstorms and the secularism of the present rulers. I have talked with many persons during the last few days. All were trying to read the riddle of Russia's future.

One writer with a restless probing mind, who was very keen on war and who assured me at the time of the democratic conference that the Russian State had collapsed, now declares that Bolshevism is a new religion. He is not a Bolshevik, but he is extremely interested. He compared Bolshevism as a mass movement with early Christianity, and there certainly are points of semblance, for instance, in the fanatical sectarianism and marked apocalyptic tendency.

My friend admitted that Bolshevism as a religion could not last because its aims are purely material, and its material basis would inevitably fail; but he considered that while it did last it would work extraordinary changes.

It is certainly true that Bolshevism as a mass movement has an almost religious quality. I remembered a little railway man who assured me in almost Bibical phrase that Bolshevism made glad the soul, though he was doubtful of the ultimate results, and none who knows the history of Russian dissent can have failed to notice that many of the emotional tendencies of the extreme sects seem to have combined with great force in this new movement.

Given the idea of Bolshevism as good tidings to the poor, as a short cut to an earthly paradise, its infectious character and the power that lies in its childish irrationalism become intelligible. Even that extraordinary jargon with which the Bolshevist writers and speakers disfigure the Russian language, seems to have on the masses the effect of a strange ritual language in the Church service.

Another Point of View.

Another friend, more skeptical, regards Bolshevism simply as an unwholesome product of decomposition. The revolution, he says, was not a revolution, but simply the breakdown of the enfeebled and antiquated state organism under the strain of war. The mob let loose from all authority and restraint is simply plunging on in its instinctive, restless way in search of a new equilibrium. If the war goes on much longer, he says, the same thing will happen in other States, and the explosive forces that luck in our artificial civilization will be revealed.

He thought it very possible that when the elemental movement in Ruusia had spent itself and Russia was reorganized on a new basis the new State, or group of States, would be conservative and very bourgeois, and Russia as the centre of order would calmly survey the upheavals in western Europe.

Russian socialism he considered was a mere phase, a convenient label for the confused multitude of incoherent aspirations now released and revealed.

The excesses of the present movement must not, he said, be set down to any peculiar savagery of the Russian people. The excited mob, freed from restraint, is always brutal, and under similar conditions the mob in the industrial countries of the West would probably display more violence.

An American present agreed. He remarked that considering the extent of the country and complete absence of restraint there was extraordinarily little violence, and added that a mob lynching a negro in the Southern States was just as horribly brutal as a Russian mob pogroming or lynching an officer.

Others Take Gloomy View.

Other Russians I found were plunged in extreme pessimism and full of shame and loathing for the excesses of their

GERMANS RESENT BLOW AT EMPIRE IN WILSON TERMS

VIENNA PRESS HOSTILE

Threaten to Shoot Pilots Dropping Wilson Message.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Friday, Jan. 11.—The Daily Chronicle says this morning:

"It is stated that a million copies of President Wilson's address will be dropped in Germany from airplanes. It is excellent propaganda, and, if every German could read the address, there might be a national strike against the war, but Germany recently sent a communication through the Swiss authorities to the Allies, stating that pilots of airplanes used for dropping propaganda matter will, if caught, be treated as spies and shot. This threat, which would no doubt be carried out, will interfere with any such plan as proposed.

"What is now wanted is some kind of flying craft which will travel fifty to a hundred miles or more, dropping propaganda on the way. It should be a machine which could be used when there is a slight or moderate wind against it. Here is a chance for ingenious inventors to improve on the existing facilities for invading the enemy countries with moral munitions and scattering broadcast pamphlets, tracts and pictures."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 10.—The German newspapers use vigorous language in commenting on President Wilson's address to Congress.

The Cologne Gazette puts its comment on Wilson's address under the headline, "Wilson's Clumsy Trap." It says the most dangerous time since the war began approaches for the Entente, with the Russians on the point of making a separate peace and becoming allies of the Central Powers. It asserts that Lloyd George and Wilson spoke in order to create confusion in the peace negotiations, but argues that peace is fortunately not to be obtained by intrigues and machinations, but by deeds and decisive battles. The latter, it says, brought the Russians and Germans together and will bring to fulfillment that which is ripe.

"Then," it goes on, "deeds shall speak further until success also crowns the work in the west."

The Vorwärts says that the Wilson peace program will find two obstacles in Germany. The first is the indignation still felt after Wilson's last offer. Secondly, there will be distrust as to whether Wilson's idealistic flights in his address are diplomacy or simply meant to deceive Russia about a general peace and lure her once again into the morass of blood of the world war.

Calls It "Demagogic Artifices."

The Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger says:

"Reports are not complete yet, but this much is evident already: Wilson again brings all his demagogic artifices to play to create disunion in Germany and to prevent Russia from closing a separate peace with the Central Powers. He talks of an alleged rupture in the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk, while in reality the delegations at this moment are engaged in finding a way to peace.

"It must be left to the Russians whether they will be frightened by the atrocities of the German conquerors which he pictures. If they are to wait for his boasted aid, then the day of peace is yet a long way off.

"Wilson's program of a general peace may sound ever so well. He gives no directions as to the settlement of the differences among the European powers, and that's why all those who seek a peaceful arrangement in the true sense of that term have no use for his phrases."

Alleges President Is a Czar.

The semi-official Berlin correspondent of the Cologne Gazette says that there are already many signs in America that President Wilson reigns like a Czar, and that the present war has been an eye-opener as to American freedom and the influencing of public opinion in a way which none believed possible.

The paper asserts that the public and Congress have been kept in the dark about everything and that the press has been obliged to lie about the reasons for the war. It considers that the political article by Samuel G. Blythe on the achievements of the last Congress in The Saturday Evening Post Nov. 3 was an indication of this. Extracts from the article are published by the Gazette with the conclusion: "And a people ruled thus allows its President to talk of reforming us!"

A report from Zurich states that a hundred Russian "emigrants" have

Only $800,000 a Month to be Sent Abroad for Charity

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The State Department and the War Trade Board today agreed to limit money sent out of the country for charity to $800,000 a month.

This will affect moneys intended for Palestine, for the Armenians, and all similar purposes for which organized funds are sent abroad. They require a Government war license.

It was said by charity workers here last night that the action of the Washington authorities in limiting to $800,000 the amount to be sent out of the country in one month for charity probably had reference to the work of charitable organizations outside of the Red Cross. It was said also that the amounts sent for Jewish, Armenian, Syrian, and other relief work in Europe probably would not be seriously interfered with, inasmuch as the sending of a steady amount of $800,000 a month would be much more than is being sent now in some months, while considerably less than in other months.

MORE WHEAT TO GO TO NEEDY ALLIES

Exportation of 90,000,000 Bushels Planned—May Cause Shortage of Flour Here.

FOR COMPULSORY SAVING

Hoover Approves Bill to Enforce Wheatless Days—Plans to Buy 30% of Output.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Ship losses and crop failures abroad have brought about such a serious food situation in the allied countries that the United States is planning to release for export an additional 90,000,000 bushels of wheat, although the country's surplus had been shipped by mid-December.

The American people will be asked by the Food Administration to cut their consumption to make up the amount to be exported. Unless they do, the nation is threatened with a flour shortage in May, before the new wheat crop is harvested in June.

The Food Administration is considering legislation to make the saving of wheat compulsory, and has approved a bill drawn by Representative Lever, author of the Food Control bill, to enforce wheatless days. Proposals for mixed flours and for a form of war bread of mixed grains also are under consideration as possible measures to reduce the use of wheat flour.

In preparation for dealing with the situation the Food Administration has decided to purchase from the mills 30 per cent. of the output. Out of the flour purchased it will supply the Allies, the army and the navy, and will maintain reserve stores to meet any local shortage that may arise.

Some Food Administration officials think a slight flour shortage next Spring not only would not cause suffering here, but might have a wholesome effect in causing the people to turn to other cereals.

The shortage of food abroad probably will bring an early determination of a policy respecting the balance to be maintained between food and troop shipments. A decision will be left largely to the Allies, since they best can determine which will be the more useful to themselves in prosecuting the war.

PAN GERMAN PARTY GAINING NEW POWER

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 10.—Little change is reported in the political situation in Germany, although the military Pan German Party appears to be gaining power daily, and undoubtedly the speeches of Lloyd George and Wilson will increase the strength of the annexationists. The Weser Zeitung remarks that military leadership will play an increasingly important rôle in future German policy, and that von Kühlmann's fall continues to be rumored.

In order to quiet the public, the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung and the Wolff Bureau publish a somewhat belated denial of a reported confidential session of the Chancellor with the party leaders and of reports that the peace delegates have been ordered home, but the Frankfurter Zeitung is skeptical, asserting that this denial has not silenced all the questions raised or the Pan German agitation against the Government. The Zeitung openly suggests that von Ludendorff's threatened resignation was only a scare to bring pressure to bear regarding the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk and strengthen the Conservative Party.

There is still persistent talk of a military-political dictatorship, and the Cologne Volkszeitung does not believe that the crisis is over. The Madgeburg Zeitung considers the crisis more serious than the Russian invasion of East Prussia was. Even the Tageblatt, von Kühlmann's ardent supporter, admits that his position is shaky.

The Rhenish Westphalen Gazette publishes a report of a letter which the majority factions addressed to the Kaiser before the latter received the Chancellor. In this letter the majority factions requested that if the Kaiser was considering a new Chancellor he should consult the Reichstag leaders before taking any steps, asserting that in order to insure political harmony it was necessary to adopt an attitude of mutual trust and confidence regarding foreign and internal policy.

WAR DEPARTMENT MET TASK IN FULL, BAKER ASSERTS

Says No Army of Such Size Was Ever Raised and Outfitted So Quickly Before.

GOODLY FORCE AT FRONT

ADMITS ORDNANCE DELAYS

Also Uniform Shortages, but Insists All the Men Are Fully Clothed Now.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—An aggressive defense of the War Department against criticism of delay in equipping the army after the entry of the United States into the war was made by Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, today before the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

While frankly conceding that there had been delay in the early days of the war, Secretary Baker insisted that the War Department had put through a huge undertaking in a manner that ought to make the American people proud.

"A substantial army is already in France," he said, "where both men and officers have been additionally and specially trained and are ready for active service."

The Secretary told the committee that every American soldier who needed a rifle had one now. The manufacture of ordnance of every character, he said, was being turned out as fast as factories throughout the country could do the work.

Secretary Baker contradicted testimony that the army experiences a shortage in clothing, insisting that whatever delinquency there was early in the Winter had been made up. He upheld the work of the Ordnance and Quartermaster General's Departments, which have been severely attacked by witnesses before the [illegible] committee.

The War Department, he said, was confronted with a "stupendous task" when America entered the struggle, and it was difficult to get the whole war program going at once.

"No army of similar size in the history of the world has ever been raised, equipped, or trained so quickly," said the Secretary. "No such provision has ever been made for the comfort, health, and general well being of an army."

Throughout his testimony, which lasted six hours, Secretary Baker maintained that the War Department, in handling the job ahead of it, had worked expeditiously and effectively. He did not deny errors might have crept in. But whatever faults there had been, he said, were slight and did not materially interrupt the task of equipping the army.

Unpreparedness Deplored.

The Secretary admitted, in reply to searching questions by the committee, that the War Department might better have started the work of manufacturing rifles, machine guns, and heavy ordnance long before America's entry into the war, but reminded the Senators that the department had no official warning that America would be a participant.

Senator New alluded to James W. Gerard's assertion, in his book, that he had communicated word in 1916 to the Government that Germany intended to pursue its submarine policy to the end. The Indiana Senator wanted to know if the Secretary of War could not have acted upon that warning and started a preparedness program, so that America would be ready to take up arms when the hour struck for her to enter the war.

"I am not privileged to discuss a diplomatic matter," was the Secretary's reply.

Senator McKellar plied Secretary Baker with questions touching upon the system by which members of the Supply Committee of the Council of National Defense participated in contracts for war supplies in which they were financially interested. Mr. Baker replied that that system had been abandoned.

"But don't you think such a system was wrong?" insisted Senator McKellar.

"Theoretically, perhaps," said the Secretary. "But the men who served upon that committee were men of integrity and of the deepest patriotism. They took no advantage of their position. I can assure you of that."

"But would it not be possible for favoritism to creep into such a system?" pursued Senator McKellar.

"Not with the men who formed that committee," replied the Secretary.

Senator Weeks asked the Secretary about the failure of the Quartermaster General's department to take up the wool supply of the country last Spring, when manufacturers in Massachusetts and elsewhere had offered their entire output. The Secretary asserted that there was no shortage of wool and the occasion had not seemed imminent for such a step.

Insists Wool Is Available.

"Experts have told this committee that there was a wool shortage, a serious one," said Senator Weeks. Our information is that the manufacture of uniforms and blankets for the army and navy will be gravely threatened unless steps are taken to get all the wool the market has in sight."

Mr. Baker was unmoved in his insistence that plenty of wool was available.

"How is it, then, that the Quartermaster General's Department has ac-

M'ADOO ATTACKS BIG FREIGHT JAM

Confers with His Cabinet on Relief for New York and the East.

SHIPS THE MAIN PROBLEM

Bunker Coal Will Be Pushed to All Ports by Every Available Agency.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—For six hours today, Director General of Railroads McAdoo, the members of his official cabinet, and A. H. Smith, President of the New York Central, who has been placed in charge of trunk lines in the East, discussed ways and means for breaking up the freight jam that has held up shipping and threatened a coal famine in New York and New England. Conditions as reported by Mr. Smith, who has been directing operations from New York, were by no means reassuring and substantiated many of the complaints which have reached the headquarters of Mr. McAdoo here. When he left the conference room, however, and hurried to catch the 7 o'clock train from New York tonight, Mr. Smith announced that the situation generally looked a bit more hopeful.

"The anthracite coal situation," he said, "is better than it was. As far as the bituminous coal supply for New York is concerned, it cannot be denied that a sufficient supply is not going in. We have got to get bituminous coal there for certain industries and for bunkering ships.

"We are making a hard fight to improve the water transportation facilities, and are doing everything in our power to overcome the conditions which have been caused by the most severe weather for many years. If the milder weather continues conditions will soon be much more favorable. That is about all I can say. I haven't any information that any industry is suffering in the New York district to the extent that there is danger of it being forced to shut down. In fact, I don't believe there is danger of such an acute famine there."

Mr. Smith said that a brave battle was being fought against the ice-choked bays in order to get coal through to ships that were delayed in sailing, and that the fight would be kept up with every ounce of energy that could be utilized. The ice jams in Chesapeake Bay and at Sewall's Point, at Norfolk, Mr. Smith said, had badly crippled deliveries, and railroad men have described conditions as the worst in fifty years. At the latter point, it was stated, there were 180,000 tons of coal available, and ships with a capacity of 160,000 tons. Because of the weather conditions, not more than 20,000 tons were being unloaded and transferred each day. Much of this coal is consigned to New York and other ports for bunkering purposes, Mr. Smith said, and there was an excellent chance that considerable shipments would be made soon.

Mr. McAdoo had no detailed comment to make on the situation. There was no tendency on the part of any of the officials, however, to belittle the seriousness of the situation as regards the bunker coal needed to prevent a continuance of the shipping tieup and the attendant congestion of freight at the port terminals. There was simply the assurance given that the traffic experts were "gaining slowly on the operating end," and that every agency available was being used.

Mr. McAdoo was tied down by conferences on the operating problems today, and was unable to reach a decision regarding the taking over of express companies. It was predicted here, however, that this would be done as soon as the Director General's cabinet has recommended the step. Officials of the big express companies met here and prepared a report for Mr. McAdoo. It is understood that they will not fight against Government control. The officials were: G. C. Taylor, President American Express Company; B. D. Caldwell, Vice President Wells

FREIGHT PILES UP; SHIPS CAN'T SAIL

41,000 Carloads at Big Atlantic Ports Add Complications to Railroad Situation.

Government Shipments Reported Thrown from Cars—Nearly 25,000 Carloads Here.

Because of the shortage of ships, the coal situation and railroad congestion there are 41,000 carloads of munitions and supplies for the allied nations awaiting shipment at the six North Atlantic ports—Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newport News, and Norfolk. Of this total, 30,000 carloads are shipments for the United States, British, French, Russian, and Italian Governments. The 41,000 carloads do not include other thousands of cars of supplies which have been held back from the ports because of the congestion on the Atlantic Seaboard. Of the 30,000 carloads of Government freight, more than half is lying on the ground near the ports; the rest is in cars and on piers and in warehouses. The 30,000 carloads translated mean about 1,200,000 tons, or enough to load 240 ships, each carrying a cargo of 5,000 tons.

The situation at the ports has been aggravated by the shortage of coal for ships. There are ships in this harbor which have been waiting a month for coal; others which have been delayed three weeks; there are more which have been waiting ten days. On Monday thirty ships received bunker coal; on Tuesday twenty-four were coaled; on Wednesday only six ships received coal for their bunkers. This particular situation became more serious yesterday when South Amboy, the port for most of the bunker coal for this harbor, was blocked by ice three feet thick, formed by broken ice floating down upon it. Elisha Lee, Acting Vice President of the Pennsylvania Railroad, went there yesterday and took personal charge in an effort to clear the port and release some thirty barges of bunker coal which had been dumped there. There is not enough bunker coal at tidewater or en route from the mines to coal the 136 ships which were waiting at this port yesterday afternoon for coal. These ships take anywhere from 1,000 to 6,000 tons to fill their bunkers. The railroads reported yesterday that there were more than enough cars at the mines to haul all the coal offered.

Smith Confers with McAdoo.

A. H. Smith, Assistant Director General of the Railroads, was in Washington yesterday in a conference with Director General McAdoo. It is understood that they discussed the coal situation in general and the bunker coal situation in particular. The result of the conference may be that drastic steps will be taken to supply sufficient labor at the coal mines. More than seventy per cent. of the men working in the soft coal mines are Austrians, and it is hinted that there may be an inquiry as to whether these men are turning out all the coal they can.

A canvass of the situation at the six North Atlantic ports, from which most of the supplies are shipped to Europe, showed as of Jan. 5 that the following amounts of freight, by cars, were at those ports:

United States, 3,369; British, 4,683; French, 13,615; Russian, 4,823; Italian, 4,093; total Government shipments, 30,582; commercial, 10,519; grand total, 41,102.

A canvass of the conditions at the one port of New York showed this situation by carloads:

Shipments.	In Cars.	On Piers.	On the Ground.
United States	779	128	738
British	560	241	372
French	1,340	615	6,734
Russian	34	209	3,133
Italian	13	160	..
Commercial	4,360	3,125	2,136
Totals	7,086	4,478	13,107

The grand total shows that on cars, piers and on the ground 24,671 carloads are awaiting shipment here.

VOTE FOLLOWS STIFF FIGHT

Adoption of Constitutional Amendment Debated Five Hours.

LEAVE SICK BEDS TO VOTE

Mann and Sims Save Day for Suffragists—Miss Rankin Leads Their Fight.

PRESIDENT IS CRITICISED

Democrats Say His Support Violates Platform, and 102 Stand Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—By a vote of 274 to 136 the House of Representatives tonight adopted the Susan B. Anthony resolution to submit the woman suffrage Constitutional Amendment to the State Legislatures for ratification. The resolution, contended for by suffrage leaders for seventy years, commanded the exact number of votes, two-thirds of those voting necessary to submit a proposed amendment. Speaker Clark, who was favorable to the resolution, did not vote.

The vote was so close that the opposition fought hard against the admission of the vote of Representative Joseph J. Russell of Missouri, who hurried to the Speaker's desk on the second roll call and demanded that he be allowed to vote. The opposition insisted that he was not in the chamber during the roll call. Mr. Russell proved that he had been present, and his vote was counted [illegible] of the proponents. Not satisfied that they had been defeated, the anti forces led by Representative Saunders of Virginia demanded a recapitulation of the vote; that failed to change the result.

The debate, in which the leading members of both sides participated, with Miss Jeannette Rankin directing the suffrage hosts on the Republican side, lasted five hours. Many women found seats in the crowded galleries. Some were there two hours before the House convened. During the debate women knitted, but the leaders devoted themselves to intently following the argument. Nearly every woman who journeyed to the House carried a knitting bag. Acting under the rules forbidding bags to be carried into the Capitol, the guards seized such appurtenances; only a few succeeded in breaking down the rule.

Had Clark's Vote to Spare.

The vote, making the greatest national victory ever scored by the suffrage cause, came after a very hard and uncertain struggle. Backed by the support given to the resolution by President Wilson, and by the conference of Republican members last night, suffrage champions began the fight with every hope of victory. As it drew toward the close and the leaders saw that Democrat after Democrat had refused to follow the President these hopes began to wane.

The galleries, which had been all animation, suddenly became serious, and some leaders whispered, "We are defeated." The watchers were electrified when Representative Russell broke through the crowd of members surging around the Speaker's rostrum and succeeded in having his vote recorded for the resolution. Victory also could have come through the support of Speaker Clark, who had assured the women that he would be with them if his vote were necessary.

When Speaker Clark announced the final vote the people in the galleries arose en masse and cheered; members on the floor joined in the jubilation. Representative James R. Mann, the Republican leader, who had left a sick bed to give his support to the resolution, received an ovation along with Miss Rankin. Fully a thousand women congregated on the steps outside the House following adjournment and cheered with all the enthusiasm of collegians after a football victory.

Effort to amend the resolution failed. Representative Merrill Moores of Indiana offered an amendment to refer the resolution to a referendum of the voters, instead of to the State Legislatures. This was defeated, 131 to 272. While this amendment was being proposed a long protest against the resolution, signed by ex-Judge George Gray, Thomas Bayard, Jr., H. I. du Pont, and other citizens of Delaware, was read.

The only other attempt to amend proposed to limit the time for action by the States to seven years. This was defeated, 159 to 246. This amendment was offered by Representative Gard of Ohio, who urged that the same restriction should be placed on this resolution as had been carried by the prohibition amendment.

Vote of New York Delegation.

Members of the New York delegation lined up in the final vote as follows:

DEMOCRATS: Aye—Caldwell, Flynn, Dale, Maher, Sullivan, Thomas F. Smith, Dooling, Carew, Oliver, Lunn, Charles B. Smith. No—Riordan.

REPUBLICANS: Aye—Hicks, Rowe, Swift, Haskell, Francis, Chandler, Siegel, B. L. Fairchild, Husted, Platt, Ward, Sanford, Parker, Snell, Mott, Snyder, Magee, Pratt, Dempsey, Waldow, Hamilton. No—Gould, Sanders.

SOCIALIST: Aye—London.

After an hour's debate on the rule limiting discussion to five hours, the House adopted the rule, and the resolution came up for debate. The galleries had filled to capacity, mostly with women. The corridors leading to the galleries were congested. Women who had struggled for years in the cause strove in vain for admission.

All eyes in the galleries were centred on Miss Jeannette Rankin of Montana, who shared with Representative Meeker of Missouri the honor of apportioning time for the Republicans. On the Democratic side Representative Raker, Chairman of the Suffrage Committee, and Representative Saunders of Virginia, controlled the time.

Miss Rankin, the first woman to enter Congress, also had the signal distinction of making the first speech of the day. This honor came to her as the result of a gracious request from Representative Walsh, Republican of Massachusetts, who asked Representative Raker whether "it would seriously interfere with his plans if Miss Rankin should open the debate."

Mr. Baker, as Chairman of the committee, had taken his place in front of the Speaker's desk and was about to open the debate. Visibly embarrassed, he retired in favor of Miss Rankin, who delivered what proved to be the longest speech of the day in favor of the resolution. She spoke with great fervor.

Miss Rankin's Plea.

"We are facing a question of political evolution," she said. "International circumstances have forced this question to an issue. Things we have for years been taking for granted are suddenly assuming a new significance for us.

"Today we are mobilizing all our resources for the ideals of democracy. And we are finding that, with all our past wastefulness, we still have limitless resources upon which we can count. We have men for the army, the navy, the air; men for the industries, the mines, the fields; men for the Government.

"But something is still lacking in the completeness of our national effort. With all our abundance of coal, with our great stretches of idle, fertile land, babies are dying from cold and hunger; soldiers have died for lack of a woolen shirt.

"Might it not be that the men who have spent their lives thinking in terms of commercial profit find it hard to adjust themselves to thinking in terms of human needs? Might it not be that a great force that has always been thinking in terms of human needs and that always will think in terms of human needs has not been mobilized? Is it not possible that the women of the country have something of value to give the nation at this time?

"It would be strange indeed if the women of this country through all these years had not developed an intelligence, a feeling, a spiritual force peculiar to themselves, which they held in readiness to give to the world. It would be strange if the influence of women through direct participation in the political struggles through which all social and industrial development proceeds would not lend a certain virility, a certain influx of new strength and understanding and sympathy and ability to the exhausting effort we are now making to meet the problem before us.

"Today as never before the nation needs its women—needs the work of their hands and their hearts and their minds. Their energy must be utilized in the most effective service they can give. Are we now going to refuse these women the opportunity to serve, in the face of their plea, in the face of the nation's great need?

"These are heroic times, and they call for the strength and the courage and the dignity to think and act in national terms. We thought in national terms when we restricted activities by the prohibition amendment a few weeks ago. Why can we not now think in national terms and extend opportunities?

"The girl who works in the Treasury no longer works until she is married. She knows now that she will work on and on and on. The war has taken from her opportunities for the joys that young girls look forward to. Cheerfully and willingly she makes her sacrifice. And she will pay to the very end, in order that the future need not find women paying again for the same cause.

"The boys at the front know something of the democracy for which they are fighting. These courageous lads who are paying with their lives testified to their sincerity when they sent home their ballots in the New York election and voted two to one in favor of woman suffrage and democracy at home.

"Can we afford to permit a doubt as to the sincerity of our protestations of democracy? How can we explain if the same Congress that voted for war to make the world safe for democracy refuses to give this small measure of democracy to the women of our country?"

Chairman Raker said the President had been ready to approve the amendment for a long time.

"I was in conference with the President three weeks ago," he declared. "He told me the same thing that he told the committee of Congressmen yesterday. The President, the Speaker of this House, hold their positions as a result of the votes of women. Those voters realized that the Democratic Party had stood for the people."

Analyzes New York Victory.

Representative Chandler of New York denied that suffrage was adopted in New York State by the votes of pro-Germans and Socialists. He sought to show that, where the un-American vote was largest, suffrage got the smallest vote.

"The overwhelming victory for woman suffrage in New York City is deeply significant because it is highly symbolic," said Mr. Chandler. "The population of New York is truly typical of the population of the entire world, and especially of the population of the States of this Union. From every State of the Republic men and women of brains and character have gone to New York to live and labor. What is best and bravest in brains and character of the men and women of every State of the Republic is mirrored in the thought and life of the people of the metropolis. Therefore, when the brain of New York City is acting, the people of the Republic are thinking, and when New York City feels sympathy and sentiment, the heart of the Republic is beating.

"When the people of New York City declared overwhelmingly for woman suffrage it was a practical mandate to Congress to take notice that the American people, represented in every intelligent cause in New York City, demanded woman suffrage. The expressed action of the New York City electorate was an exact index of the unuttered wish of the entire American electorate.

"It has been stoutly contended that the victory for suffrage in New York was due to socialism and pro-Germanism; that it was created by disloyal and unpatriotic influences. This contention is utterly groundless and ridiculous. For instance, my district in New York City, in which are located Columbia University and Grant's Tomb, gave an overwhelming majority for woman suffrage, and in this district the vote for Hillquit, the Socialist candidate, was almost negligible. Admitting that every Socialist vote was cast for woman suffrage, and this is a reckless admission, approximately five times as many Democrats and Republicans as Socialists voted for equal suffrage in my district.

"The Ninth Assembly District of Manhattan, located in my Congressional district, is typical of dozens of other Assembly districts in the greater city. In the Ninth Hillquit received 977 votes and woman suffrage 5,911. This general average prevailed in every Assembly district of my Congressional district.

The Result Up-State.

"The results up-State were still more remarkable. The rural counties of Nassau, Orange, Suffolk, Cortland, Chautauqua, and Westchester, located in different parts of the State and inhabited, in the main, by pure-blooded, thoroughgoing Americans, voted for suffrage by a decided majority. The Socialist city, Schenectady, that elected our colleague, Representative Lunn, Mayor a few years ago, voted overwhelmingly against suffrage. The worst black eye that woman suffrage received in New York State was at the hands of its Socialist friends in Schenectady.

"But the most exquisite compound of humor and satire, of cross-eyed and clubfooted logic, is the contention that the suffrage victory in New York was due to pro-Germanism. If there is anything that a German hates worse than he does the devil, prohibition, and the Allies, it is woman suffrage. Having voted for Hillquit as a protest against the war, it is absurd to suppose that the pro-Germans would resort to woman suffrage, their pet aversion, the very abomination of their hearts, the very nightmare of their political dreams, as a means of needless repetition of this protest."

President Wilson Criticised.

Representative Clark of Florida criticised President Wilson for having, as he termed it, violated the plain provisions of the Democratic platform. The President had maintained that suffrage should come through State action, and now he was found, said Mr. Clark, attempting to coerce Democrats into voting against their party and their personal convictions.

"President Wilson on many occasions has declared that, while he favored woman suffrage, he considered it a matter for State action," said Mr. Clark. "He made that statement no longer ago than 1916 to an audience in Denver. Why has he changed that position? I will remind the House, too, that after the last Democratic National Convention, the President was roundly scored by Mrs. Catt, President of the National Suffrage Association, who said the President was playing fast and loose with the women. She referred to the Democratic platform, adopted virtually at the command of President Wilson, which declared the States must settle the question.

"I say to you now that no leader, be he Democrat or Republican, has the right to abandon his party, especially on a matter of such vital importance to the nation as this. No specious reasoning can justify such a change as the President has made in his position."

Representative Cantrill, Democrat, of Kentucky, was repeatedly jeered when he said several times in his speech that he was one of the committee of twelve members of Congress who called on the President yesterday. The jeers came from the Republican side. As the interruptions continued Mr. Cantrill turned upon his critics and said:

"At no time and on no occasion am I ever ashamed to confer with President Wilson, and you will find that this House at the close of the day will follow him."

Mr. Cantrill devoted himself to reading the President's position as announced to the committee, and ended by saying that it was in the President's own language.

One of the Republican floor leaders, Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, caused surprise by announcing that he had become convinced that the resolution, which he voted against in 1915, should now be adopted. He asserted that the great majority of Republicans long had favored the resolution, and called attention to the action of the party in conference.

"President Wilson has changed his mind also," concluded Mr. Lenroot. "It is a kindly augury that I hope may lead the President to yield to Republican influences upon other important questions."

Votes from Sick Beds Potent.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Republican Leader Mann, who came from a Baltimore hospital, where he has been under treatment ever since Congress convened, and Representative Sims of Tennessee, just out of a sick bed and hardly able to walk to his seat, brought the votes which carried suffrage in the House.

The House had hardly adjourned before the suffrage champions began their fight for favorable action on the Senate side of the Capitol. Recent polls there have indicated that the necessary two-thirds vote could not be mustered, but, encouraged by the House victory and counting upon the influence of President Wilson, the suffragists hope to bring the Senate into line so as to have the amendment before State Legislatures during the coming year. They feel sure at least of forcing a vote in the Senate before the present session ends.

Advocates of the amendment had been so supremely confident of the result in the House after President Wilson advised the members who called upon him last night to support it that the close vote was received with amazement, and some of the opponents were almost as much surprised.

President Wilson's support is credited with changing many Democratic votes. The party divided almost evenly, with a margin of two yeas. Until yesterday it had been assumed that a large majority of the Democrats would oppose the resolution.

There were two women on the floor during the contest—Miss Jeannette Rankin, Representative from Montana, and Miss May Offterdinger of this city, who, as clerk of the Woman Suffrage Committee, sat beside its Chairman, Representative Raker.

WOMEN'S CAUSE WINS IN HOUSE OF LORDS

Amendment to Exclude Them from the Suffrage Defeated by 134 Votes to 69.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The House of Lords today, after a two days' debate, rejected Lord Loreburn's amendment to the Representation of the People bill, by which it was sought to exclude women from the suffrage. The vote against the amendment was 134 to 69.

The debate showed one important convert to the women's cause in the Bishop of London, but Earl Loreburn, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Baron Finlay, and Earl Curzon strongly opposed placing the names of 6,000,000 women of the voting register. They argued that the present House of Commons, which had been extended beyond its natural life owing to the war, had no mandate to decide such a momentous question. Moreover, it was illogical, if the vote was given, to stipulate the age of thirty years as a qualification.

Lord Curzon argued that wherever the vote had been granted to women, a stimulus had always been given to socialism.

OPPOSED TO REFERENDUM.

Governor Wants Legislature to Act on Prohibition Amendment.

Governor Whitman, it was learned yesterday, will oppose a referendum on the prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States. The Governor believes that the proposal was brought forward at this time as a trick on the part of liquor dealers, who see an opportunity to defeat the amendment. The Governor, it was said last night, will insist that the Legislature act upon the matter at the present session, but that if too much opposition materializes he will then favor putting it over until the Fall and let it become an issue in the campaign.

The Governor is in favor of retaining Oscar S. Straus as Chairman of the Public Service Commission. Mr. Straus's term as Chairman expires on Feb. 1, and while he has not communicated with Mr. Straus to learn if the latter desires to stay, the Governor is willing to have him remain. The Governor attended a dinner and conference last night at the home of Commodore Arthur Curtiss James at Park Avenue and Sixty-ninth Street. The conference dealt with the work of the New York and New Jersey Port Commission in regard to the improvement of New York Harbor. Governor Edge and all the members of the commission were present. A report on the progress made is expected to be issued in a few days.

RATIFIES DRY AMENDMENT.

Virginia Senate Passes It and House Will Vote Today.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 10.—The national prohibition amendment was ratified tonight by the Virginia Senate by a vote of 30 to 8. A resolution to submit the amendment to a referendum was defeated, 28 to 10.

It is expected that the House of Delegates will vote tomorrow.

GERMANS RESENT BLOW AT EMPIRE

Called "Will to No Peace."

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 10.—Commenting on President Wilson's address to Congress, the official Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung of Berlin says:

"The fourteen points do not form a program for world peace, but a real symphony of will to no peace. Beginning with his joyful fanfare of freedom of the seas and other things, on which the whole world is agreed, even if diversity of opinion exists regarding the method of realization, Mr. Wilson's intervention is not wanted. Having the opportunity of serving peace, he has not only failed, but has clearly expressed a contrary intention.

"Appealing to the self-determination of nations, he presumes to interfere in the internal affairs of Austria-Hungary and proclaims the policy of doing violence to nations with disregard of all historical and racial facts.

"With equal nonchalance he finds reason for the partition of Turkey, such as could only be voiced by a man whose policy aims at the playing off, one against the other, of peoples and parts of peoples which belong together and are conscious of their homogeneity."

"More Brutal" Than Lloyd George.

The Kölnische Volkszeitung says:

"President Wilson's program substantially squares with Lloyd George's. It is as unacceptable for us as is the British and is more brutal still than that of Lloyd George. He demands the severance from the German Empire of Alsace-Lorraine, which is nine-tenths inhabited by Germans, and he undisguisedly demands the severance from the empire of parts of Prussia inhabited by the Poles."

The Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, in an article under the heading, "The Entente's Wirepuller," speaks of "the unbranded impudence with which the leading statesmen of the multiple alliance deceive the whole world."

Vienna Press Aroused.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 10.—The Vienna newspapers, according to dispatches from that city, consider President Wilson's proposed peace conditions such as could only be imposed if the quadruple alliance was completely defeated.

The Fremdenblatt, in declaring them unacceptable, says:

"President Wilson's message reveals clearer than Lloyd George's speech the intentions of our enemies to let Russia continue to bleed for the selfish aims of the Entente."

The Neue Freie Presse says: "President Wilson is superior even to Lloyd George in his capacity for deceiving the nation. President Wilson intersperses his fourteen points with popular principles in order to deceive the masses, who do not know our conditions. The message also, of course, aims at breaking up the negotiations at Brest-Litovsk.

"President Wilson says that the time for conquest and aggrandizement has gone by—of course, for the Central Powers, not for the Entente. He admits that Russia is impotent and helpless. He cannot deny that the Central Powers' proposals are capable of a liberal interpretation. Yet he continues slandering and war baiting."

The Neues Wiener Tagblatt says:

"President Wilson must be made clearly to understand that it is useless to try to win over the Central Powers for the Entente's plans of disruption and disintegration. Austria-Hungary will be master of its own house. Our peoples do not need Mr. Wilson's protectorship. If President Wilson is unable to appreciate the justice of the Central Powers' standpoint, we can but patiently wait, for it will not be much longer before our enemies learn to sift the impossible from the possible."

The Neues Wiener Journal argues that President Wilson's demand for the restitution of Alsace-Lorraine erects a new barrier.

Die Zeit also declares that this demand cannot be discussed and that interference with the Monarchy's affairs is inadmissible, but notes with joy that the enemy is "coming down."

"Some one is now wanted," adds the paper, "to help on the moderation a few more degrees. Then perhaps a proper level will be reached, when our opponents will regain their senses and be willing to negotiate."

The Reichspost calls President Wilson's fourteen points a simple enumeration of the Central Powers' well known wishes, but accuses him of seeking to hinder peace negotiations at Brest-Litovsk.

BALFOUR PRONOUNCES SPEECH "MAGNIFICENT."

But Wilson Will Not Alter German Policy, He Says—Henderson Hails Address.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Addressing a war aims meeting at Edinburgh tonight, Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, referring to President Wilson's "magnificent pronouncement," said:

"The United States have now for the first time in their history entered the great struggle of civilization against barbarism, of freedom against tyranny. I do not think that these new views on co-operation in the New World could have been introduced in a nobler manner than they have been introduced in the public pronouncements of President Wilson.

"I think that the day America entered the war was one of the most important in the annals of mankind. But it must be remembered that the pronouncements of Premier Lloyd George and President Wilson contain nothing that was not implicitly stated in the utterances of other statesmen, including the late Premier.

"The spirit that has animated Britain and her Allies has undergone no profound modification. We did not enter the war for selfish motives and we are not going to fight to the finish for selfish motives.

"I can see little improvement in the attitude of the Central Powers except that they now admit that it might be better for mankind if in the future wars were averted. That shows some improvement in the moral tone of the Germans, but so far as I can understand German pronouncements they have not begun to understand the moral horror which their procedure has instilled even into the most recalcitrant students of German methods and aims.

"As to Belgium, Germany has unhesitatingly and absolutely rejected the view that she should do something to reconstitute what she, against all international morality, has utterly destroyed.

"With a power like Germany lacking morality, none of the objects mentioned by the Premier and President Wilson can be realized. I am not going to discuss whether a league of nations has reached the stage of being a practical ideal. While I recognize the difficulties, it would be mean and cowardly to shrink from them. I hope the world at large will take that great problem in hand and see it through.

"If we are going to have a League of Nations in order to render international relations stable and secure, we must have international relations based on a stable foundation. Only this would make the league effective.

"If a German peace were made, we should have all over Europe centres from which morbid effects would flow—France with the great wrong of Alsace-Lorraine unredeemed, Poland a maimed community, and Italian unity imperfectly accomplished.

"A German peace would not leave the world as the war found it, but far worse. All the horror we have suffered would not be equal to the horror that would fall upon us, our children and our grandchildren if the war should end with a German peace."

Arthur Henderson, former Labor representative in the British War Cabinet, interviewed today by The Associated Press regarding President Wilson's address to Congress, said:

"Coming as it does so soon after Premier Lloyd George's speech and the Labor Party's war aims memorandum, President Wilson's message must expedite peace negotiations unless Germany has hardened her heart and has decided to oppose all movements which make for the interests of democracy.

"Freedom of the seas makes a league of nations necessary. Such a league must be prepared to punish any recalcitrant nation by closing the seas to it till it is ready to behave.

"While we found the Premier in his speech met the expressed wishes of labor in almost every respect, it is fair to say that he was not quite as cordial toward the present Russian Government as he might have been. President Wilson's outstretched hand leaves no room for doubt in Russian minds. He says: 'Here's our hand. We are ready and anxious to help.'"

Henry M. Hyndman, leader of the British Socialists, and Dr. William Gavronsky, who was Special Commissioner of the Kerensky Government to Great Britain, sent a cable dispatch to President Wilson today protesting against what they termed the President's identification of the Bolsheviki with the democracy of Russia. The message said that Mr. Wilson was "strengthening the hands of autocratic despotism and supporting lawless rule which is destroying the foundations of Russian freedom and Russian power of resistance to the German enemy."

M. Gavronsky issued the following statement at the Russian Embassy:

"The Allies made a big blunder in relation to revolutionary Russia. They did not define their war aims clearly during the time of M. Kerensky's Government, and thus they placed a powerful weapon in the hands of the Bolsheviki in their fight against the Allies, as well as the Kerensky Government, which always supported the war policy of the Allies.

"Were it not for this blunder we would not be witnessing the unfortunate spectacle of Russia being drawn into an abyss by Bolshevist rule, and an alleged representation of Russia carrying on peace negotiations. Another blunder must be prevented at all costs. The Allies ought to base their policy in Russia on their friends, not on their enemies, the Bolsheviki."

Viscount Bryce, former British Ambassador at Washington, said today in regard to President Wilson's speech:

"The address is admirable in spirit and contents. Mr. Wilson rightly points out that an international combination to arrest the aggressions of ambitious sovereigns and military castes and to secure the rights of peace-loving peoples is essential to the future well-being of mankind. In his enumeration of objects to be secured by peace, the following points seem specially important:

"His broad, clear assertion of the right of a nationality to self-determination, removal of economic barriers to trade, adequate guarantees for reduction of armaments, absolute independence for Belgium, and full compensation for her wrongs, sympathetic comprehension and consideration of the present situation of Russia, and deliverance of all subject nationalities from the brutal and sanguinary rule of the Turks.

"Those in Great Britain who know how abominable the rule of the Turks has been heartily welcome this declaration and that recently made by the British Prime Minister, that the Allies and the United States regard liberation of the Christian and Arab peoples of Armenia, Syria, and Palestine as an essential condition of any just and durable peace."

CANADA GRATEFUL, DEVONSHIRE SAYS

Governor General Voices Admiration of Dominion at President's Statement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Full and complete indorsement of President Wilson's statement of America's war aims, as well as of his program for world peace, was given tonight on behalf of the leaders and people of the Dominion of Canada in a speech delivered before the National Press Club by the Duke of Devonshire, Governor General of Canada, who came to Washington to pay a courtesy call upon President Wilson. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, and other members of the British Embassy accompanied the Duke to the club and applauded his utterances.

"I have come to Washington," said the Governor General, "in order that I might have the opportunity of being able to express to the President and the members of the Administration, and as far as lies in my power to the American people, that most cordial sympathy and good-will that exist throughout the Dominion of Canada. I can assure you that this feeling is very deep.

"One of the most remarkable occurrences during the fourteen months I have had the honor of being connected with Canada was the declaration of war by this great country and the knowledge that you were heart and soul in the great undertaking to which we have pledged our last man and our last dollar.

"I can assure you that we in Canada, not simply looking at the material side and the help which we all knew we could get in the way of financial assistance and supplies of men and material, felt that with the entry of the United States into this great struggle the bond which has existed between us so long would not only be intensified but increased to such a degree that nothing ever again could sunder it.

"No doubt it will produce many changes. It will alter the outlook and the consideration of many questions. But there is one thing certain, that never again, in so far as lies in our power, shall we allow such an outrage to be perpetrated against civilization and against humanity. The address which was delivered by the President two days ago will stand out as an historic document through all time, and I think it is being rightly described by the press in my own country and Great Britain as the 'Magna Charta of Peace.'

"Those responsible for the guidance of affairs are now passing through a time unequaled in the history of the world. The very least we can do for them is to let them know beyond a doubt that the people are supporting them and are prepared to stand behind them through thick and thin until we obtain our object."

FREE SEAS PROGRAM STILL UNDER ATTACK

Danger of Opening England to German Invasion Is Emphasized in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Daily Graphic says that Great Britain, under existing world conditions, cannot possibly agree with President Wilson's demand for freedom of navigation.

"This proposal," it asserts, "cuts at the very root of the power of Great Britain. Hitherto it has been our national policy to maintain a very small army and an overwhelmingly powerful navy. We have pursued this policy because we live on an island and the roads of our commerce and the links of our empire are on the sea.

"As President Wilson's proposal stands it would lead to the absurdity that Germany should be free to send her armies across the sea to invade England and we should do nothing to stop the transports until they reached the three-mile limit of our territorial waters. If his proposal is intended to apply only to commercial vessels, then our answer is that the navy of an island power has as much right to blockade an enemy port as the army of a continental power has to besiege an enemy city. There cannot be one law for the sea and another for the land."

Contrasts Attitude on Russia.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—President Wilson's address, says The Manchester Guardian, was partly a strong affirmation and partly a supplement to, even a correction of, Premier Lloyd George's statement, which contained no word of sympathy for the fight which the Russian Government is making on behalf of the liberties of peoples and the right of the provinces which German and Austrian armies are overrunning to determine their own political future.

Commenting on the President's remarks concerning freedom of the seas, The Guardian says they will surprise many persons, who would not expect Mr. Wilson to favor abolition of the right of capture at sea, in view of the "vigorous fashion" in which the United States supported the British blockade of Germany. The demand for free navigation, it continues, has been the official policy of the United States since Franklin's days. Every one knew the United States would raise this question when she could, The Guardian remarks, and when she raises it at the peace conference it is to be hoped that it will be discussed in the light of the experiences in this war.

The Guardian says that Mr. Wilson intends to hold this question in suspense, to be rivived in regard to punishment for breaches of international compacts. It regards this as a great advance from the former American position, and says that the English people would be wise to consider how far the relaxation of the traditional American doctrine goes toward meeting their objections.

FRANCE WELCOMES SUPPORT.

Alsace Demand Is First Peace Condition, Says the Matin.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The passage in President Wilson's address to Congress relating to Alsace-Lorraine is emphasized by all the Paris newspapers.

The Matin says that the restoration of the lost territories is the foremost condition of peace, not only of France but of her allies. It refers to Mr. Wilson's speech as an immense effort at conciliation by a sincere democrat.

The Petit Parisien says of the speech: "It is the finest piece of political literature of our times. It lays down the basis upon which the world, after being rid of the perpetual menace of armed conflicts, may be reconstructed. The speech contains no harsh threats, but the terms laid down are all the more irreducible because their moderation is evident."

L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper, says that Mr. Wilson's thought is that of the whole American nation.

Humanité, a Socialist newspaper, says President Wilson's speech is the starting point toward either an early peace or the certain and final defeat of the Central Empires.

Alfred Capus writes in the Figaro that President Wilson, like Premier Lloyd George, has given an admirable expression of the conditions essential to a stable peace, which will make this war a great movement for civilization instead of only a monstrous sanguinary adventure.

Our Merchant Marine

Out of the war comes a revival of our merchant shipping. The disbursements of the Government for the Shipping Board are estimated at $900,000,000 for the current fiscal year, and almost an equivalent amount is estimated for the coming year.

The plans of the Shipping Board call for 10,000,000 tons of ships, in addition to the 90 German ships and 14 Austrian vessels we have taken for use during the war.

Although now in first place among the nations of the world in international trade, the United States must be prepared to face keen competition after the war. The production of our industries is largely dependent upon the banking system of this country and the co-operation of the individual banks.

For 66 years the Citizens National Bank has confined its operations to commercial banking, and offers its facilities to manufacturers and merchants whose business may require additional financial connections at this time.

Transportation

Economical transportation, both for passengers and commercial use, will be a chief consideration in this country for years to come.

And it is reasonable to suppose that the automobile will help to meet the requirements for increased facilities.

The automobile stands ready to serve the people of the world and the future will show the motor car to be a faithful servant of all humanity.

The time is not far distant when we will wonder how we were able to make any progress whatever without the motor car.

AIRCRAFT PROGRAM PROGRESSING WELL

Howard Coffin Says Personnel, Training, and Equipment Are Up to Schedule.

BUILDING CRAFT FOR ALLIES

Quantity Production Already Begun Here—Big Purchases Abroad for Pershing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Howard E. Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Production Board, issued a statement tonight on the progress made in the nation's aircraft program, answering assertions that there had been serious delays.

Mr. Coffin stated the national aviation program as follows:

1.—The United States to establish and maintain a great system of training stations, adequate both in ground schools and flying schools, to provide preliminary training for the personnel schedule.

2.—To accomplish an international standardization in aircraft materials, in detail of design and types, and to achieve such co-ordination of effort as would concentrate the manufacturing facilities of the various allied countries upon the minimum number of types of those machines for which the producing equipment was best fitted.

"International specifications for aircraft materials have been prepared under the direction of the board by a committee representing the Allied countries. A complete co-ordination of manufacturing facilities and policies has been agreed upon between the Allied powers."

3—To construct primary training machines of quality and quantity approved by the Joint Army and Navy Technical Committee.

"The production of standardized training machines approved by the Joint Army and Navy Committee will be in excess of the needs of the program of Jan. 20."

Mechanics by Thousands.

4. To provide, equip, and train personnel for flyers and mechanics in accordance with schedule recommended by the Joint Army and Navy Technical Committee.

"This program is progressing exactly on schedule. The training of both fliers and mechanics is provided for in this and in allied countries. Thousands of mechanics are being put into actual service with the allied forces. American fliers are in training in the United States and abroad and it is probable that the original program for pilots will be increased."

5—To provide raw and semi-finished materials and finished parts, including motors, to insure the consummation of the augmented allied aircraft building programs.

"This has been and is being done."

6—To provide for the equipment of the American forces in France for the period of January to June, 1918, in large part by purchase of fighting machines manufactured in allied countries, and to supply the machine-tools and raw and semi-finished materials necessary to insure their production.

"One of the first acts of the Aircraft Board after the passage of the Appropriation bill in July was to authorize the placing by General Pershing of orders for several thousand fighting machines in allied countries. Many millions of dollars' worth of materials and machine tools have been shipped from this country to aid this production."

7—To provide completed service machines, including combat and bombing types, for American need after July 1, 1918, and for such shipment of the finished product overseas as tonnage might permit.

"In accordance with the plans originally agreed upon with allied Governments, it was deemed advisable to provide for advanced training overseas adjacent to the actual theatre of military operations. The training facilities thus provided have been overcrowded, with resultant request that early arrangements for advanced training he made in America. To meet this change in program, delivery of advanced training planes will begin this month, and within ninety days will have met requirements. The engines of general design for this advanced training schedule are already in quantity production in this country."

Producing Allied Engines Here.

Mr. Coffin's statement continues:

"In discussing the accomplishments of the Air Service in the consummation of the army program, it will be well to point out the impossibility of certain proposals, enthusiastically and persistently put forward by word of mouth and in the press. We have seen and heard much of the proposal of '100,000 air planes' to be provided by the United States within the next year.

"In a country where one great industry produces a million and a half motor cars per year, the fabrication of a hundred thousand planes might seem easy, but actual figures, based on three years of practical experience in the war, show that there are now between forty and fifty men of the auxiliary services required for each active machine at the front. If this same ratio should be adhered to in our service, it would mean that some 4,000,000 would be required in our aeronautical department on foreign soil between our ports of debarkation and the fighting front.

"Every decision of the Aircraft Board has been based upon the military policies of the front. Daily cable communications with allied countries is maintained. The freest possible exchange of information, machine designs, and aircraft experts with foreign countries is in effect.

"Airplanes and engines of the very latest European development are going into production in the United States as quickly as, and perhaps more quickly and in greater quantities than, in allied countries. The feat of getting the twelve cylinder U. S. A., or so-called Liberty Engine, from the first scratch on paper in June to the beginning of production of quantity-manufacturing tools in November, is one never equaled, even among the spectacular performances of the American motor car business.

"Since the passage of the Aircraft bill in July hundreds of concerns have asked for contracts to manufacture planes. Inasmuch as an organization of Government accountants, inspectors, and production men must be maintained in each plant engaged upon the aircraft program, the complication, expense, and general impossibility of splitting up the work among a multitude of small contractors, each capable of producing only a few machines, should be clear. Should the Allied Governments contemplate, as the war progresses a further extension of American producing resources, there will be no difficulty in building up new sources of supply in every line of the work.

"Established plants of the motor car industry are being largely utilized in the program of aircraft motor production, but automobile concerns are not being employed in airplane construction. In general, the statement may be made that not a single automobile factory is in any way involved in the plane-building industry. The reasons for utilizing the motor-building talent of the third largest of the world's industries permit no argument.

Co-ordinating Committee Abroad.

"There has been established in Paris under the direction of the Aircraft Board a Joint Army and Navy Aircraft Committee to co-ordinate the activities of army and navy in foreign territory and to form a direct channel of contact between the Interallied Aviation Committee and the Aircraft Board in Washington.

"The board has arranged with foreign Governments for a free interchange of manufacturing rights and patents governing aircraft for the duration of the war. Endless business negotiations with foreign private interests have thus been avoided and delays have been eliminated and the expenditure of many millions of dollars prevented."

BAKER DEFENDS WAR DEPARTMENT

cepted specifications calling for 35 per cent shoddy in overcoats and 50 per cent. shoddy in uniforms?" demanded Senator McKellar.

The Secretary of War replied that the overcoats and uniforms issued to the army were in every way acceptable and that, until word to the contrary came from General Pershing in France, the War Department would hold to the shoddy mixture.

The rag-sorting base in New York came up, Senator McKellar demanding to know why a contract had been made that gave a profit of 4 cents a pound, when a ½ cent a pound was found to be adequate. Mr. Baker knew little about the rag-sorting contract, he said, as that was left to the Quartermaster General.

"The Government has taken it over now and there has not been one dollar of loss," the Secretary said.

"If there was a mistake in making such a contract—and I won't say it was not a mistake—no harm was done."

The Secretary of War opened his testimony by reading a statement dealing with the organization of supply work when the country went into the war and the achievements of the department since that time. After reading the statement, he submitted to quizzing by the committee. Throughout his evidence Mr. Baker puffed a cigar. He spoke quickly and bore himself with the confident air of one who felt he had mastered a big job, and was not afraid to say so.

Questioned About Rifles.

Senator Chamberlain opened the questioning of the Secretary by mentioning before the committee in criticism of the failure adequately to equip the army with rifles, machine guns, and heavy artillery when the United States went into the war.

"The supply of rifles is, of course, now entirely adequate, and the accumulation of a reserve is going on very rapidly," replied Mr. Baker. "When we went into the war we had the best rifle which had yet been devised in the world. Everybody agreed that the Springfield was the best military rifle."

"I want to suggest that the statement that everybody agrees that the Springfield rifle, excellent as it is, is the best rifle in the world, is very far from the fact," interposed Senator Weeks. "Also, there have been grave doubts about changing the form of ammunition expressed by those competent to pass upon it."

"I do not pretend to have talked to everybody in the world, but I can say that those with whom I have talked, without dissent or exception, have agreed that the Springfield is the best rifle the world has ever had," replied Mr. Baker. "I would have supposed that difference of opinion might exist as to the wisdom of making a change in the type of ammunition used at this stage."

The cartridge had been changed to a rimless one, the Secretary said, so as to avoid jamming in the gun, and the change had been justified. When the United States went into the war, he said, the National Guard had about 500,000 Springfield rifles. Besides, there were Krag-Jorgensen rifles in storage.

"One of the criticisms indulged in against the Ordnance Department has been that, notwithstanding that we were calling into the service 1,500,000 young men, we abandoned the Springfield rifle, which was being manufactured by our own arsenals, and adopted the Enfield, which was being used by the English forces, and which was being manufactured in large numbers here," said Senator Chamberlain. "It took some time to change and to adopt a gun of our own along the lines of the Lee-Enfield rifle, and they were manufactured by a slower process."

Adequately Supplied Now.

"That is perfectly true," admitted the Secretary.

"Criticism has grown out of it because the young men in the cantonments were without guns and are without them now," commented Senator Chamberlain.

"Not now. They are adequately supplied," replied Mr. Baker.

"It has been done then within less than thirty days?" suggested Senator Chamberlain.

"Undoubtedly, within the last thirty days," conceded the Secretary.

Senator McKellar alluded to evidence of General Crozier that all the men who needed guns would not have them until Feb. 15.

"I think he must have had in mind that the completion of the first draft would bring in substantially 100,000 more men, but I understood the facts to be, and it is more or less immaterial, that every man now in camp in this country who ought to have a rifle has a rifle," was the Secretary's reply.

"I think if you had reports from the cantonment commanders that they would near bear you out," said Senator Chamberlain.

"I have no desire to stress the point," answered the Secretary.

"I think it is relatively unimportant. But it is contended that the men should have had the rifles, and the delay in furnishing them was caused by this change made by the Ordnance Department," insisted Senator Chamberlain.

"I think the delay was caused by the change the Ordnance Department made," was the reply. "I approved the change. I think we acted rightly in so doing."

"In the last analysis, the guns were not furnished these young men?" asked Senator Chamberlain.

"That is true," assented the Secretary.

Senator Chamberlain spoke of "serious criticism" of the Ordnance Department over the delay due to altering the rifle so as to make it interchangeable. The Senator said "inefficiency" had been alleged against the Ordnance Department. Secretary Baker admitted there was delay in making the rifles interchangeable, but added:

"In view of the fact that the supply of rifles is now much more largely interchangeable and is wholly adequate, really anticipating the country's needs, I think any loss of time which brought us larger interchangeability of parts was justified."

"The criticism goes only to the inefficiency or alleged inefficiency of the Ordnance Department," insisted Senator Chamberlain.

"It is not inefficiency to change one's mind and to get something better than you had previously determined upon," replied Mr. Baker. "If the Ordnance Department found it could get better results by getting a greater interchangeability I should call it efficiency rather than inefficiency."

Chamberlain Pursues the Point.

"With the war on us and with these young men called into the service, there was such an emergency that it did not call for the highest type of gun?" pursued Senator Chamberlain.

"I dessent from that view," replied Mr. Baker. "The war was not on us. The war was in Europe. We had more guns of the highest type that needed no redesign than could possibly be used on the highest percentage of allowance for wastage by all the troops that we could get to France in a year."

"If you use the same basis that was used by the continental armies of Europe, we did not have enough to supply them," argued Senator Chamberlain.

"Exactly so," assented Mr. Baker. "When we started in the war the percentage of wastage was estimated very high, but the use of other implements of war and the different character of this war, considering the evolution of large forces, have made the percentage of rifles per thousand men so much lower that every European country has an enormous accumulation of reserve rifles in excess of what it expected to provide for its forces."

"It is a fact, however, is it not, that the war was on us to a sufficient extent as to impel the Government to send troops to France as fast as they could get them, and in their haste, due to the lack of rifles, men went on board transports without having fired a rifle?" asked Senator Wadsworth.

"I said the war was not on us in the sense that the enemy was not at our doors," was the Secretary's reply. "He was 3,000 miles away. We had to send troops to where he was. The fact that some troops went aboard the transports, as you say, who were not provided with rifles is true, and there will be some fresh men who still have to be trained, but the body of men who went away were men who had fired rifles."

"The fact that war was not on us directly did not absolve us from any obligations to use the greatest haste possible in getting the armed men to the front," interruptdd Senator Weeks. "The criticism has been made against the Ordnance Department, and it seems to me to have some reason behind it. There has been too great a desire for technicality and too little 'pep' in advancing the necessities of the army from that bureau."

"You realize this is a question of judgment," retorted the Secretary. "The battle front was 3,000 miles away—"

"To my mind, it does not make any difference whether it was 5,000 miles away or 1 mile away," broke in Senator Weeks. "Our obligation was the same."

"It does make a difference whether it is 1 mile or 5,000 miles," insisted Mr. Baker. "You can get your men 1 mile very quickly, but you can move them 10,000 miles very slowly."

Senator Chamberlain wanted to know what steps the War Department took to develop the character of arms America would use in the event of going into the war, from the time war broke out in 1914. The Secretary did not know, he said, but he had no doubt the Ordnance Department had in mind the Springfield rifle.

Recalls Gerard's Warning.

Senator Chamberlain failed to understand, he said, why the War Department had not started early in the war developing the Springfield, or some other rifle, so as to have the army adequately equipped.

Senator New alluded to the statement of James W. Gerard, in his book, that in May, 1916, he had, in his official capacity as Ambassador to Germany, "notified this country that Germany would renew and continue her policy of submarine warfare." The Senator asked if the Secretary knew of that warning at the time. Mr. Baker could not say whether he knew of it. "It did not make any impression on you, if you did not know it?" asked Senator New.

"Any information I had on that subject was of a confidential character," was the Secretary's answer.

"Don't you think that a year's time would have given you an advantage in adjusting rifle differences?" asked Senator New.

"Why, ten years ago would have been a good time," assented Mr. Baker.

"But here was an official notice given by the Ambassador to Germany to this Administration," pursued Mr. New. "It would seem to me that that would at least form the basis of some definite steps on the part of the War Department."

Mr. Baker insisted that he could not "discuss diplomatic matters."

Senator Wadsworth brought out that in 1916, after Ambassador Gerard's word to the Government, the Government's arsenals that produced Springfield rifles were idle.

In reply to questions as to rifle equipment to the army, the Secretary said that, with requirements of 1,165,000 on Jan. 1, the number actually delivered was 1,001,000, leaving a shortage of 164,000. Since then deliveries have been made, he said, that would bring the aggregate up to nearly 1,165,000.

"It is safe to say," added the Secretary, "that every man now has a rifle who wants to have one."

Shortage of Machine Guns.

The evidence turned to machine-gun equipment. Senator Chamberlain remarked that evidence before the committee indicated that there were "practically none" in the cantonments. "At least the number is wholly insufficient, is it not?" asked the Senator.

"It is a relatively small number," replied Mr. Baker.

The Secretary characterized the controversy over the Lewis gun as "acrimonious." He went into "all the controversy from top to bottom," he said, at all its stages. It was not accepted until last Summer, he said, because it did not come up to the tests.

"I read every criticism and comment, and all the literature of that controversy, and the net result of it was this: That the Lewis gun had never been presented to the department as a perfect weapon chambered for American ammunition up to that time," he said.

Senator McKellar suggested that, as there was urgency for any character of machine gun at the start of the war, the War Department should have accepted the Lewis gun, which had been in use by the British forces for three years. He reminded the Secretary that Congress had appropriated $12,000,000 in August, 1916, for machine guns, but the War Department did nothing up to May 1 but "try to make up its mind" what gun to use, when the Browning was adopted as the official army gun. The Secretary maintained that the Lewis gun was accepted when it proved its effectiveness.

"Are you entirely satisfied, so far as all ordnance is concerned, with the progress the department has made?" asked Senator Weeks.

"I don't say that the department might not have expedited some phases of its work," Secretary Baker replied.

"In what have we failed?"

The Secretary hesitated and answered: "I can't answer it that way; I can't pick out any particular place."

Senator Weeks asked if all available ammunition production facilities were being used.

"No, not all," said Secretary Baker, "but all will be when we need them."

The arrangement to get British and French ammunition for artillery, he said, was "safe as far as it goes," but he said the principal reliance was placed on American sources.

When Senator Weeks again asked if he could suggest anything that would be helpful in speeding up ordnance production, Secretary Baker replied:

"I can't think of anything that your work will help. Whenever I've thought of anything I've done it. I'm up to date now."

Wants a Powder Plant.

Secretary Baker said he thought a Federal powder plant advisable.

Senator Chamberlain referred to the du Pont offer to build and operate a plant at cost, but Secretary Baker explained the offer was to build a plant for a commission of 15 per cent. and operate it for eighteen months. On the basis of a $90,000,000 investment, he explained, the du Ponts would have made a gross profit of $20,000,000 to $40,000,000.

"They never at any time offered to erect a plant without compensation," he said. "The present powder supply is adequate for our present needs."

Senator New asked if there was any mistake of judgment when the Lusitania was sunk, in not beginning preparations for war.

"It would have been very wise," Mr. Baker replied, "if a dozen years ago the Ordnance Department had begun preparations. To be perfectly frank with you, I think General Crozier is not entirely to blame. In season and out, he has recommended ordnance expansion."

Secretary Baker denied that the first American contingents sent abroad were not completely equipped. All sent then and since, he declared, have had adequate, standard equipment, except that recent contingents depend for automatic rifles and artillery on French sources.

Senator Wadsworth asked if the American artillery program was large enough.

"You never can have too much," Mr. Baker replied, "but the program fully engaged the resources of the country as they ought to be. Every country's artillery program has grown every month during the war."

Secretary Baker assented to Senator Wadsworth's statement that the war was a competition of industries and that whichever produced the most materials and men would wear out the opposition.

"That is the present aspect of it," he said.

Shortage of Clothing.

Operations of the supply system of the Quartermaster General were then taken up. Secretary Baker pointed out that "overnight we changed from a free and competitive market to one in which the Government was the monopolizing buyer."

"Some substitutions of materials were authorized," Secretary Baker continued. "Manufacturers overestimated their own capacity. The early dispatch abroad of special forces, such as stevedores and railroad employes, cut into the early supplies gathered. There was a shortage of many articles, including overcoats, blouses, trousers, and perhaps some others. They were far greater than we anticipated. Initial equipment now is substantially complete, and reserve supplies are being secured."

The Secretary said it had to be decided whether to call out more men than could be readily equipped or call out only those for whom equipment was ready.

"The course actually taken was to reconcile these views, calling out the forces as rapidly as we could anticipate their equipment, and I have no reason to change my opinion since," he continued. "The net result was a temporary shortage of a few weeks, in some equipment such as overcoats, but there was not in my judgment any serious or continued shortage."

Senator McKellar asked what authority of law there was for taking away General Sharpe's purchasing powers.

"In the first place I was the head of the army," Mr. Baker answered. "In the secnod place the law provided that the Secretary could fix prices as he deemed best, and I surrounded General Sharpe with expert advisers."

The Tennessee Senator said witnesses had testified that contracts aggregating $128,000,000 had been let to firms with which supplies committee members are connected.

"I don't think that has been done," said Mr. Baker. "I have looked into it many times. No such thing has been done."

Regarding the system of civilian committee purchasing, Mr. Baker said:

"I don't think that is the very best way to deal with these questions, but it was the only way at the outset. Substantially, it's stopped now. There never was any intention of continuing it indefinitely."

Cancelled Rag Contract.

The Secretary said he cancelled the much-discussed rag sorting contract on the recommendation of the Quartermaster General and because the Government proposed to do the rag sorting work itself. The Base Sorting Company, he said, was to get a profit of only one-half cent a pound.

"Are you willing to assume responsibility for organization of the sorting plant?" asked Senator McKellar.

"I couldn't escape it if I wanted to," Mr. Baker answered. "I delegated my authority to Mr. Eisenman. I know nothing improper about it."

Senator McKellar referred to the relationship between Samuel Kaplan of the Supplies Committee and a brother interested in the sorting plant, and Secretary Baker said he did not know of the relationship until recently.

"Do you think a policy of that kind is wise?"

"It has turned out to be unwise," said Secretary Baker. "But you can't get anybody to buy things wisely unless you get men who are experienced in their business."

"How much did the blunder, or whatever you may call it, cost the Government?" asked Senator Chamberlain.

"Nothing," Mr. Baker replied.

Questioned about secrecy attending the awarding of army contracts, Secretary Baker declared he issued an order that nothing be made public, and that he considered it a wise policy.

"Don't you know the American people abhor secrecy?" asked Senator McKellar.

"I think," said Mr. Baker, "that the location of plants should not be made public as a military policy."

"Did it endanger factories working for the Navy Department which did make contracts public?" he was asked.

"I can't say as to that."

Senator Frelinghuysen declared that the criticism leveled against the system was that the policy of secrecy permitted some men to get contracts, but prevented others from getting the business.

Mr. Baker said that so far as he knew he personally never was advised of the change in specifications by which shoddy was used in uniforms. He had been advised that the uniforms were adequate when shoddy was used.

The Secretary said he had not been advised of any shortage of wool, and that he knew nothing of Boston wool men offering the Government large quantities of wool at low prices soon after the outbreak of war. He did receive an offer from the Western Wool Growers' Association to sell its entire cut at a price to be fixed by the Government, and the offer was referred to the Raw Materials Committee of the Council of National Defense. He did not know what was done about it.

The question of buying up the country's wool supply involved a matter of Government policy, said Mr. Baker. Asked specifically why the War Department waited from April 3 to June 16 to take up the question of wool, Secretary Baker said many other questions were up for consideration.

Senator Wadsworth wanted to know why some of the President's one-hundred-million-dollar fund was not spent if the War Department had insufficient funds, and Mr. Baker said some of it was spent for ordnance.

Secretary Baker said that no complaint ever had come from General Pershing as to the light weight of uniforms. Uniform cloth was ordered in England by General Pershing, he said, not because he could get a better quality, but because American deliveries were slow.

War Department Set New World's Record In Raising and Equipping Army, Says Baker

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Secretary Baker, in his statement before the Senate Military Affairs Committee, summarized the achievements of the War Department as follows:

"1. A large army is in the field and in training; so large that further increments to it can be adequately equipped and trained as rapidly as those already in training can be transported.

"2. The army has been enlisted and selected without serious dislocation of the industries of the country.

"3. The training of the army is proceeding rapidly and its spirit is high. The subsistence of the army has been above criticism; its initial clothing supply, temporarily inadequate, is now substantially complete, and reserves will rapidly accumulate. Arms of the most modern and effective kind—including artillery, machine guns, automatic rifles, and small arms—have been provided by manufacture or purchase for every soldier in France, and are available for every soldier who can be gotten to France in the year 1918.

"4. A substantial army is already in France, where both men and officers have been additionally and specially trained and are ready for active service.

"5. Independent lines of communication, and supply and vast storage and other facilities are in process of construction in France.

"6. Great programs for the manufacture of additional equipment and for the production of new instruments of war have been formulated.

"7. No army of similar size in the history of the world has ever been raised, equipped, or trained so quickly. No such provision has ever been made for the comfort, health, and general well-being of an army. The health reports for December, for a variety of reasons, became suddenly less favorable than for the preceding months; but the unfavorable conditions have been met and improvement is already apparent."

Mr. Baker explained that he had particularized as to the achievements of the War Department because "the American people are entitled to know of the splendid effectiveness with which they have been able to organize the manpower and the material power of the nation in a great cause, and, also, because our army in France under General Pershing and our allies are entitled to have the benefit resulting from the depression of the morale of their enemies which must come when the Germans realize that the American democracy has neither blundered nor hesitated, but has actually brought the full power of its men and resources into completely organized strength against their military machine."

"I make this statement fully aware that there have been produced before the members of this committee some expressions of doubt, difference of opinion, and disapproval," said the Secretary. "The War Department has spent eight months hearing similar expressions, analyzing them, correcting the conditions out of which they grew perfecting its organization to prevent their recurrence; and all the while driving on to the accomplishment of the main task."

Six Times Size of Army of '98.

In opening his statement the Secretary said:

"In April, 1917, the regular army comprised 5,571 officers and 121,797 enlisted men; the National Guard in Federal service, approximately 3,733 officers and 76,713 enlisted men, and the reserve, 4,000 enlisted men. At that time approximately 2,573 officers were in the reserve on inactive duty, so they could not properly be considered in estimating the strength of the army. On Dec. 31, 1917, the regular army consisted of 10,250 officers and 475,000 enlisted men, the National Guard of 10,031 officers and 400,900 enlisted men, the National Army of 480,000 men, and the reserve of 84,575 officers and 72,750 enlisted men.

"In other words, in nine months the increase has been from 9,324 officers to 110,835 officers; from 202,510 to 1,428,650 men.

"During the war with Spain, the army of the United States at its maximum strength aggregated 272,000 men and officers. The army now in the field and in training is, therefore, roughly six times as great as the maximum number under arms in the Spanish-American war. The number already in the military service is one and a half times as large as any force ever mobilized this nation."

The Secretary of War spoke of t operation of the draft law, in creating the major part of the army, as having proved itself "the economical and efficient way of selecting soldiers."

"The law itself was drawn, its execution carried to a successful conclusion and the theory of the law, novel to our people, explained and made popular because of its demonstrated fairness both in plan and execution," he went on.

"For the training of officers two series of training camps were held, from which about 45,000 officers were commissioned from civ. life. This was nearly eight times as great as the number of officers in the regular army in April.

Army's Health Never Better.

"For the training of these soldiers sixteen cantonments have been built," the Secretary said, "costing $134,000,000, with an average profit to the contractors of 2.98 per cent. These cantonments contain water and sewage facilities, refuse disposal plants, laundries, storehouses, barracks, exchanges, Post Offices, and practically all necessary conveniences, comforts, and safeguards for soldiers. The health of the men in training in them is beyond comparison better than that of any similar number of soldiers in our history.

"The death rate in our forces in the United States, from mid-September to the end of December, averaged 7.5 per thousand, and is slightly less than would have been the death rate of men of the same age at home. In 1898 the death rate per thousand was 20.14, or nearly three times as great. Our death rate in the army during the year 1916, just before the war, was 5 per thousand. Leaving out the deaths due to measles and its complications, our rate among all troops in the United States, since Sept. 1, has been about 2 per thousand. That will be the average for the year."

Secretary Baker pointed to the low death rate as indicative of what he called the "splendid sanitary system" of the cantonments.

Going into the money put at the disposal of the War Department, the Secretary said that in 1915 Congress appropriated for the War Department $158,000,000; for 1916, $203,000,000; for 1917, $403,000,000; for 1918, $7,527,338,716.

"In other words, taking 1915 as a normal year, the appropriations for 1918 are nearly fifty times as great," he commented.

Of the appropriation for 1918, the Secretary said, $3,200,000,000 was for the Ordnance Department. By way of comparison, he spoke of the value of the products of all iron and steel industries in the United States in 1914 as $900,000,000, or less than one-third of the amount to be expended by the Ordnance Department. Of the $3,200,000,000 appropriation the Ordnance Department has already placed contracts amounting to $1,677,000,000, Mr. Baker said.

Growth of Ordnance Force.

On April 1, 1917, the Ordnance Department comprised ninety-seven commissioned officers, he said, while it now has 3,004 officers, and, besides, 26,120 enlisted personnel.

"In addition to the selection and training of this new force, the making of great contracts, and the follow-up necessary in the manufacturing processes, a continuous study of new weapons and instrumentalities has been kept up, a constant contact kept with trained men abroad studying the operation of ordnance material in battle and accordingly modifying designs and plans here by reason of observation and experience," the Secretary said. "The trench warfare material alone involves contracts of $282,000,000. Some of the contracts cover instruments so modern that our industries had to be adapted to their manufacture.

"For the Quartermaster General's Department in 1918 $3,018,000,000 was appropriated," the Secretary said, "or more than four times as great as the 1915 appropriations for all Governmental purposes. On April 1 there were 347 officers in the Quartermaster Corps, while on Jan. 1 last there were 6,431 officers.

"On the first day of January, 1918, nearly $2,000,000,000 of the appropriation had been obligated by contracts or disbursements," said Mr. Baker. "In the woolen goods section alone, the cooperation of over 300 mills was involved. This section alone has purchased over 19,000,000 blankets, 20,000,000 yards of overcoating, and over 30,000,000 yards each of shirting flannel and suiting, involving an expenditure of over $345,000,000. In cotton goods the department has contracted for 250,000,000 yards of various cotton cloths."

To give, as he said, a further idea of the size of purchases in the Quartermaster's Department, the Secretary quoted these items of purchase up to Dec. 29:

Winter drawers, 25,000,000 pairs; Winter undershirts, 21,000,000; woolen gloves, 11,000,000 pairs; wool lightweight stockings, 31,000,000 pairs; wool heavy-weight stockings, 21,000,000 pairs; shoes purchased for delivery to Jan. 1, 10,000,000 pairs; shoes purchased for delivery Jan. 1 to June 1, 10,000,000 pairs; overcoats, 2,100,000.

86,000 in Aviation Corps.

The Aviation Division of the Signal Corps on April 1, 1917, Mr. Baker said, consisted of sixty-five officers and 1,120 men, while on Jan. 1, last, it comprised 3,900 officers and 82,120 men. For this division an appropriation was provided aggregating $744,000,000 for this year, or five times the 1915 appropriation for the entire department.

The Engineer Department, for which, in 1917, $53,000,000 was appropriated, was allowed in 1918 an appropriation of $300,000,000 or about 700 per cent. increase.

"There have been organized, trained, and equipped technical troops of foresters, stevedores, and railroad construction and operation men, aggregating about 120,000, many of whom have been operating in France for some months," said the Secretary.

"The figures I have given you," the Secretary went on, "show the magnitude of operations of the War Department. These results have been achieved.

Purpose of War Council.

Mr. Baker went into the reorganization of the War Department on Dec. 15, when the War Council was created, comprising General Crozier, who had been Chief or Ordnance; General Sharpe, Quartermaster General; General Weaver, General Crowder, and the Chief of Staff, who were appointed to sit with the Secretary of War and Assistant Secretary of War. To this council, he said, "men of capacity, either from the army or from civil life, will be added from time to time.

"The purpose of the council is that its members, being free from the burdens of detail administration, can take a large supervisory view of all questions of organization and supply, and give to the Government the highest value of their talents and experience," he explained.

After going into the functions of the Council of National Defense, which he described as "a conciliation of conflicts and a survey of the national needs and resources," the Secretary said that the council's work had been effective.

"It has served and is still serving its purpose," he said. "The general munitions board and its successor, the War Industries Board, were organized by the Council of National Defense to:

"1. Assign priorities as among the several departments of the Government and the allied Governments in their demands upon the industries of the country.

"2. Advise as to supplies of materials and labor.

"3. Advise on questions of price.

"4. Secure industrial and labor cooperation.

"5. Avoid enhancement of prices, confusion of industry, exhaustion or labor, and generally to prevent all avoidable evils which might result from the speed and magnitude of the new operations."

The Munitions Board and War Industries Board, Mr. Baker said, had "accomplished a great work.

"The initial rush needs of our army are substantially supplied," he went on. "The technical corps have been expanded and reorganized upon industrial and efficient lines. The co-ordination of ally needs with our own purchases has been effected. An agency exists to prevent conflicts and to adjust those which cannot be prevented.

"By the co-operation of all interests and all people in the country, the nation is now organized and set to its task with unanimity of spirit and confidence in its powers. More has been done than anybody dared to believe possible.

"That there have been here and there errors of judgment and delays goes without saying; but I should be wanting in frankness were I to omit my own estimate of the real unselfishness and intelligence with which my associates, military and civilian, have applied themselves to this undertaking, and the results demonstrate the success of their efforts."

BOXBOARD INDUSTRY ORDERED TO SAVE FUEL

Forbidden to Use It Between 7 A. M. Saturday and Same Hour Monday of Each Week.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The first definite order for the conservation of fuel by industries not absolutely essential to the war program was issued today by Fuel Administrator Garfield. By its provisions boxboard manufacturers are forbidden to use coal, coke, natural gas, fuel oil, or other petroleum products from 7 A. M. on Saturday of each week, until 7 A. M. the following Monday morning.

The agreement to put this program into effect was reached after conferences with representatives of the industry, and the plan was recommended by them as the most effective way to save coal without working too severe a hardship to the interests involved. A statement by the Fuel Administration today estimated the saving at 15,000 tons of coal a week.

The order specifies that the industry affected includes all manufacturers of boxboard, paperboard, strawboard, binderboard, tagboard, and other kinds of board made from waste paper or rags. The decision was reached on a vote of the majority of the manufacturers who come under the ruling. Provision is made in the official order that any person, firm, association, or corporation violating the regulations shall be prosecuted.

Dr. Garfield has summoned representatives of about 100 industries to Washington to discuss similar arrangements by which he hopes to reduce the coal consumption about 50,000,000 tons during the coming year.

PLAN TO REPUDIATE THE RUSSIAN DEBT

Bolsheviki Talk of Canceling All Loans and Bonds Held at Home or Abroad.

TOTAL OVER $11,000,000,000

Government Already Has Suspended Stock Transactions and Forbidden Payment of Dividends.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Philips Price telegraphs the following from Petrograd under date of Jan. 8 to The Manchester Guardian:

"The Popular Commissioners intend in the course of the next few days to publish a decree canceling Russia's national debt. I understand the decree will contain the following provisions:

"1. All loans and Treasury bonds held by foreign subjects abroad or in Russia are repudiated.

"2. Loans and Treasury bonds held by Russian subjects who possess more than 10,000 roubles as capital are repudiated.

"3. Loans and Treasury bonds held by Russian subjects possessing a capital in loan script or deposits not exceeding 1,000 roubles will receive 5 per cent. interest on the nominal value of the loan, and those possessing 10,000 roubles will receive 3 per cent.

"4. Workmen and peasants holding 100 roubles' worth of loan or bonds may sell their holdings to the State at 75 per cent. nominal value and those holding 600 roubles' worth at 70 per cent."

LONDON, Jan. 10, (Associated Press.)—A Reuter's dispatch says that the Bolshevist Government has issued a decree suspending all payments of dividends by private companies. The Government also has forbidden transactions in stocks pending the issuance of ordinances relating to the further nationalization of production and determining the amount of interest payable by private companies.

One of the last statements of the last Imperial Controller of Finance, M. Pokrovsky, a year ago was that loans for $8,300,100,000 would be required if the war were to close before the end of the year 1917. How much of this the Imperial Government succeeded in floating before the March revolution; how much the Provisional Government managed to gather in, is not known. But certain banks, both in London and New York, continued to pay interest on certain Russian loans even after the Bolshevist coup d'état of November, when the rubie, nominally worth 50 cents, was quoted at 19.

According to an exhaustive report of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce issued after the great revolution, the Russian national debt on Jan. 1, 1914, was $3,400,000,000; during the first two years of the war additional loans, covering war expenses, were incurred to the extent of $8,611,920,000, making a total indebtedness on Jan. 1, 1917, of $11,011,920,000, which at 5½ per cent. required $605,655,600 to meet annually.

The total foreign indebtedness of Russia, prior to the war, was $2,230,000,000. During the first two years additional loans were incurred amounting to $2,480,000,000. She borrowed from the United States $275,000,000. To offset payments of interest Russia had, until the revolution, for a number of years a favorable balance of trade. The average yearly value of the excess of exports over imports amounted to $169,000,000.

It is evident, said the chamber's report, since Russia will not be able to meet her foreign interest charges in payments of gold, it would be unwise to adopt a policy of incurring additional interest payments, and the only solution of Russia's financial problem lies in—first, greatly increasing her export of raw materials, particularly that of agricultural products, and through the organization of her timber industry; second, the elimination of all unnecessary exportations, and third, the immediate organization and stimulation of home manufacturing production.

Russia, the report went on to say, is in a position to supply the world with the bulk of food products by intensifying her agricultural production. She is greatly increasing the quantity and quality of her food production, as well as he supply of meat and dairy products. In view of the general shortage of food products such an increase, it is argued, will largely solve the question of the proper balance of trade after the war.

In addition Russia has 50 per cent. of the world's undeveloped timber area, and is in a position on account of her natural position and through the organization of her timber industry, to supply the increasing demand of Europe.

BRITISH RAID THE FOE SOUTHEAST OF YPRES

Attack German Trenches at Three Points, Killing Many Men and Taking a Few.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Raids by night and gunfire by day are virtually the only activity on the British front, according to the War Office bulletins.

Tonight's report says:

Early this morning we successfully raided at three diferent points the enemy's trenches southeast of Ypres, inflicting many casualties and capturing a few prisoners and two machine guns.

The hostile artillery was active during the day south of Bullecourt, west of Lens and east of Ypres.

The day bulletin reads:

The hostile artillery has shown slight activity in the neighborhood of Gonnelieu, (southwest of Cambrai.)

Otherwise there is nothing to report.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The War Office report today says:

The French easily repulsed a German raid against small posts on the western edge of the Upper Coucy Forest.

The artillery fighting was active in the region of Vauxaillon.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

BERLIN, Jan. 10, (via London.)—The official statement from General Headquarters today says:

Southwest of Ypres there was a lively artillery duel in the afternoon. West of Zandvoorde a strong British reconnoitring attack, launched during the night, broke down.

There was very little fighting on the remainder of the front.

Berlin Admits Loss of 82 in December, Says Foes Lost 119.

BERLIN, Jan. 10, (via London.)—The War Office report today says of aviation activities:

"In December the enemy losses in aircraft on the German front amounted to 9 captive balloons and 119 airplanes, of which 47 dropped behind our lines. The rest were observed to fall behind the enemy's positions. We have lost in battle 82 airplanes and 2 captive balloons."

ELATED AT CAPTURE OF DYE SECRETS

British Manufacturers Have Way Opened for General Use of German Formulas.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The Daily Mail's announcement that a group of men in the British textile trade has succeeded in obtaining in Switzerland the secret recipes of the German dye industry has created great satisfaction in industrial circles.

The merchants who have captured the recipes, The Daily Mail says, do not intend to form a monopoly in this country. They refused tempting offers from capitalists. It is their intention to offer the recipes to the British Government for use in already established works. Their sole desire is to secure for the whole of the textile industry of England a full and cheap supply of fast dyes.

Two men were chiefly instrumental in capturing the recipes. They are John Leyland and Richard Baldry, London textile merchants. Two years ago they heard of a chemist in Switzerland who possessed the recipes for the Badische aniline dyes and sent a representative to get in touch with him. Later they obtained the assistance of the British Government and were allowed to obtain help from F. M. Row of the Manchester School of Technology, a leading dye chemist, who went to Switzerland, where he conducted tests with the recipes, which were entirely satisfactory. The Foreign Office detached a Consular officer to watch the experiments and certify their correctness.

Leyland, speaking to a Daily Mail representative yesterday, said:

"We are indebted to the Foreign Office for placing every facility at our disposal. In fact, without the aid of the Foreign Office it is doubtful whether we could have got the samples or recipes to England. Our agent was dogged by German agents on every journey he made to Switzerland. His baggage was stolen, he was drugged and assaulted, and thrown into a gutter. Once he was followed by two men as far as Havre. He reported the facts to the French authorities, and they succeeded in capturing two undoubted German agents.

"On one occasion he was traveling with a diplomat whose baggage was marked with the same initials as his own. This man's baggage was also stolen en route.

"We are prepared to sell the recipes to the Government for use in the Government dye works and to allow the major portion of the profit to go to the nation on the understanding that the dyes will be sold freely to all British manufacturers who require them in their industries. There is hardly an industry in England which does not use dyes in one form or another. They are, of course, essential to the textile industries."

The Daily Mail says that on a cheap supply of dyes depend British textile industries with an output of more than £200,000,000 a year. The dye monopoly before the war gave Germany an export trade in fine chemicals of £97,500,000, according to Professor Grossmann. It also gave her almost a complete monopoly in the output of certain explosive gases, photographic chemicals, drugs, and sources of power derived from splitting up petroleum and gas tar products.

PUTS SHIP OUTPUT AT 5,000,000 TONS

Harley Contradicts Ferguson in Estimate of 1918 Total and Quotes Lloyd's Report.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—To the statement of H. L. Ferguson before the Senate Commerce Committee that only 3,000,000 tons of shipping would be constructed in American yards this year, Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board, replied today with the assertion that the total output would be approximately 5,000,000 tons. In support of this a Lloyd's report was quoted, which put the capacity of American yards at from 4,500,000 tons to the 5,000,000 estimate of Mr. Hurley. Lloyd's, it was stated, did not take into consideration the plans for speeding up work in the yards.

own people and for the complete breakdown of all ideas of honor and right. They foresaw nothing but the partition of Russia between the powers, America and Japan, say, taking the Far East; England the Caucasus, and Germany and Austria European Russia. Many expected that the excesses of Bolshevism would culminate in the restoring of despotic rule either in the form of a monarchy or military dictatorship.

Others of a more constructive and hopeful turn of mind already perceived order coming out of the chaos. The destructive action of the Bolsheviki, they said, was painful, but it had a useful side. The old system was rotten and only a clean sweep could make possible a thorough reconstruction. The present process, in their view, is inevitably elemental. Lenine and Trotsky will have their day and cease to be, like Milukoff and Kerensky, and if ever any of these leaders reappear on the surface they will be changed and wiser men, working on changed material.

All parties, cadets, social revolutionaries, and Bolsheviki, they consider necessary in the coming mental phases that are to be superseded by new formations in new conditions. Russia must die to live, must fall apart to come together again.

One hope lies in the organization of local centres like Ukraine, the Cossack country, the Caucasus and Siberia. An all-Russian patriotism is intelligible only to the highly educated. Local patriotisms would be much more powerful as constructive forces and might ultimately combine in a new general sense of the common interests of all the parts. The economic and political system of Russia would be entirely changed. Ukraine would develop industry and would export its products through the Black Sea. The concentration of all political and economic movement on Petrograd and the Baltic is no longer possible. The Baltic seaboard, with Riga and Reval, is now entering a new orbit; and with the Letts looking perforce towards Germany and the Esthonians pulling towards Finland, Petrograd must necessarily lose its importance as an all-Russian political, commercial, and industrial centre.

Constituent Assembly a Failure.

As for the Constituent Assembly, none seemed much interested in its fate. Most regarded it as the survival of an obsolete, abstract phase of the revolution. The Bolsheviki had done their best to render it innocuous from their point of view, but in any case it would have been useless. The system of proportional voting by which the central committees of the parties had made up lists of candidates for every constituency had led to absurd results. For the most part members did not know their constituents. A large number of amiable men and women who had rendered services to their party had been elected for such governments as Stavropol, Sammara, Vitebsk, and Tomsk without ever having been near their constituencies or having a notion of their needs. The result was an assembly of inexperienced theorists many of whom had spent all their adult life outside Russia.

All hope of the Constituent Assembly as the power that was to decide the future of Russia and establish a new law has vanished from the peoples' minds. That is shown by the steady expansion of the area of agrarian rioting. The peasants were willing to wait at first for the Constituent Assembly to decide the land questions. Every fresh disturbance in Petrograd by increasing uncertainty led to a fresh outbreak of attacks on estates and now that hope of the Assembly is gone and no further goal is visible agrarian riots, stimulated by the Bolshevist agitation, disorderly demobilization and the absence of a restraining force, are spreading with an almost calculable regularity of direction and movement in the Central Governments. There will not be an estate left intact by Spring.

But that is only one detail of the vast story of suffering and ruin that accompanies this elemental process in Russia. In such reflections as these and in the fantastic exchange of fantastic stories of robberies, bank adventures, and the vagaries of the Commissaries and Red Guards many thinking Russians spent the strange, sad Christmas of 1917. What does it all mean? What does this toppling, crashing process, this welter of bizarre Socialists and novel nationalism over one-seventh of the globe mean for the future of Europe and civilization?

OFFICERS CALLED BACK TO THE ARMY

Bolsheviki Prepare for Swift Reestablishment of Fighting Power if Parley Fails.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—The point of most importance in the news from Brest is that of the agreement reached between the Russian and Ukrainian delegations. Foreign Minister Trotzky's position would have been weakened if Ukraine, as once seemed possible, were to negotiate on other lines than his own. If the Germans could buy off Ukraine that fact would in itself have significance inside Germany as to Trotzky's stand.

Anything more foolish than the supposition that because Ukraine is opposed to the Bolsheviki it, therefore, is in favor of the Allies and of the prosecution of the war can hardly be imagined. The position of the Rada merely lessened Trotzky's chances of obtaining a satisfactory peace. It did not in any way make a separate peace less likely.

Meanwhile Lenine has left Petrograd, possibly to confer with the German and Austrian Socialists in Stockholm, or possibly merely for a short holiday in Finland. Before his departure he made a speech in the committee concerned with demobilization, where he said:

"I fear we shall have to stop demobilization and prepare for war. If Germany and her allies do not accept our conditions of peace then we shall declare a revolutionary war against Germany. We will not agree to a shameful peace."

Questions under consideration are the defense of Petrograd, the possibility of removing heavy artillery from the northern front in case of a final break in the negotiations, and methods for the swift re-establishment of the fighting power of the army. Krylenko is said to be organizing a volunteer army. It is reported from the front that Krylenko has issued orders that all officers shall return to the posts they had before the Bolshevist revolution.

ASK BRITISH AID ON DRINK.

Dr. Newton States Our Position on Selling to Men in Service.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—Preaching in the City Temple today, the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, formerly of Iowa, referred to his recent sermon in which he discussed the question of drink among American soldiers and sailors. He said he wanted the British to understand the American point of view. Americans, he added, held that if the Government had a right to conscript a man on behalf of the great cause, it had the right to conscript his conduct and keep him fit to do that work.

"In America," he continued, "it is a criminal offense to sell liquor to men in uniform. On this side, of course, you cannot enforce this regulation. I made the request that you shall help us do so. Most of the men are able to resist temptation, but we must not set traps to catch the loose feet of those who are fighting with a weak will.

"When the fact was published that increases in the amount of grain were being allowed brewers it filled Americans with amazement. Of course, there has been an improvement in the matter of drinking."

SOCIALISTS BITTER ON POLICY TO RUSSIA

gan of the German Independent Socialist Party says:

"The German Government has disclosed its war aims. Today the Russian, German, English, French, and Italian peoples know what the German Government wishes to obtain in its negotiations with Russia.

"It is neither peace without annexations nor a democratic peace, but a peace which will go to increase the political, military, and economic power of Germany in the East. The German Government wants to exploit the Barons of the Baltic region and the Polish middle classes.

"For the purpose of masking its real resolutions toward those peoples, never has German policy been so doubtful. Whoever sustains it makes himself a partisan of violence and of the policy of conquest. It is certain in this new light that the aims of the Central Empires consist simply of vast ambitions.

"So much for the East. What will be the Government war aims in the West? Too truly, alas, the democracies will pay for the revelations of today with fresh torrents of blood."

COSSACK GENERALS LOSE.

Dutoff Reported in Flight and Kaledine Retreating.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—Generals Kaledine and Dutoff, the Cossack leaders, the official news agency announces, have been defeated. General Dutoff is in flight, pursued by revolutionary soldiers and the Red Guard. General Kaledine is retreating.

The Workmen's and Soldiers' Council at Rostov has been liberated. The Cossacks, the announcement adds, are unanimously against General Kaledine, whose troops sent toward the Don River are retiring.

An official announcement says that "the revelation of criminal relations between the Ukrainian Rada and General Kaledine has opened the eyes of the people concerning the infamous trafficking in the blood of Ukrainian workmen, soldiers, and peasants"

The power of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Council formed at Kharkov is reported to be increasing, while the Ukrainian Council of the Eleventh Army has been arrested.

FRENCH ENVOY TO UKRAINE.

General Tabouille's Appointment Taken as Republic's Recognition.

PETROGRAD, Jan. 9.—The French Government has appointed General Tabouille the representative of France to the Ukraine Republic. This is considered in Petrograd as recognition by France of the independence of the Ukraine.

The announcement of the appointment of General Tabouille was made by an officer of the French Military Mission to M. Shougin General Secretary of Foreign Affairs for the Ukraine, at Kiev.

ELLSWORTH TELLS OF KAISER ARTICLE

Notable for Strictures on Turks and Catholics, Says Former Head of Century.

WISHES IT HAD BEEN USED

Would Have Done the Kaiser Great Harm — Tells How It Was Suppressed at Germany's Request.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Jan. 10.—For the first time excerpts from William Bayard Hale's article on the Kaiser, which was suppressed by The Century Magazine ten years ago on request of the German Government, were made public tonight through William W. Ellsworth, for many years the President of the Century Company. Mr. Hale's article for The Century was prepared after the original interview had been suppressed, and, in its turn, it met the same fate.

"As near as I can remember," said Mr. Ellsworth, "the Emperor said 'Taft had the wool pulled over his eyes when he was in Rome, so that he made the arrangements he did with the Philippine friars.'

"Another statement as I remember it," continued the speaker, "said 'Archbishop Ireland is a secret enemy of America.'"

This revelation was made by Mr. Ellsworth in a lecture tonight at Witherspoon Hall in the University Extension Course, and was heard by a large audience. Continuing, Mr. Ellsworth said:

"My recollection is that there was no war talk by the Emperor, nor can I recall that he attacked England. I do remember, though, that he was especially vindictive toward Turkey, while the attack on Japan was also bitter. My only reason for revealing the gist of the famous interview at this time is that we should do everything in our power to harm the Emperor. I hear there is another copy in existence somewhere, and it is the duty of the man who has it to produce it and publish it.

"His attack on the Roman Catholic Church was certainly no such interview as any monarch should have given, and a complete publication can do great harm to the Kaiser in Austria, Spain, and other countries where there are great masses of Roman Catholics among the nationals of these nations."

"In the Autumn of 1918," Mr. Ellsworth said, "Dr. William Bayard Hale, then connected with THE NEW YORK TIMES, decided that he could obtain an interview with the German Emperor. He went to Germany and from the Foreign Office obtained consent to interview the Emperor but on condition that his remarks should be submitted to the Foreign Office for approval.

"Dr. Hale agreed and went to the Norwegian waters where the Emperor was aboard his imperial yacht. And for two hours on the moonlit deck the Kaiser talked while Hale made notes. Returning to Berlin Hale submitted the interview to the Foreign Office. It was agreed that it might be published, but there was a stipulation that it was too sensational for publication in a newspaper but should be given to some review, or in other words, published in a magazine.

"Hale wired to us regarding it and we offered to purchase the interview for $1,000. We had the interview in type in October and all ready for our December issue, which went on the street the latter part of November. On Oct. 2 the Kaiser gave his famous interview to The London Telegraph, which created a tremendous sensation all over the world and which the Foreign Office tried vainly to suppress.

"It was only a few days afterward that Richard Watson Gilder, editor of The Century, was called to the telephone for a conversation after this fashion:

"'Has The Century a manuscript of an interview with the Kaiser?'

"Gilder said it was already in sheets, and then the voice offered to pay all expenses if it would be suppressed. This was agreed to.

"The editors talked the matter over and one of our bright young men went to the De Vinne Press, where 100,000 of these sheets were all ready. Without anybody being the wiser of his mission he had these all packed and placed in a safe deposit vault. Every proof and every sheet containing a word of that interview was destroyed, while the expenses, between $2,000 and $3,000, were paid to us.

"The news of the affair leaked out, and one newspaper offered $12,000 for a proof, another raising the offer to $15,000. But they were, of course, refused. At that time we were friendly with the German Government, and everybody held the Emperor in fair esteem, so that it was a natural thing to accede to this request.

"However a few days afterward a man met Gilder in the street and said: 'Have you any copies of the Kaiser's speech?' 'Certainly,' he said, 'we have 100,000 in the safe deposit vaults.' 'Well,' asked the questioner, 'what would you advise the German Government to do with them?'

"'Oh,' said Gilder, jokingly, 'why not send a warship over for them.' Then he walked away.

"Imagine his surprise when some weeks later he was called on the telephone and informed that a German warship had arrived for the sheets. Sure enough there was a cruiser, and while there was much conjecture as to the reason she had arrived, none really learned her mission.

"The cases were all taken abroad at night and she sailed away. Some time after this one of our editors was at a dinner, when a young German naval officer sidled his chair to him and said: 'I suppose you would like to know what became of those sheets of the Kaiser's interview?

"'Well,' the young officer said, 'when we got 500 miles from New York we threw the first case overboard. It floated instead of sinking and a boat was lowered and sent away to retrieve it. Then for some time the officers and men were kept busy in the stokeroom tearing and burning every one of those sheets.'

"I wish now we had published that interview ten years ago. It was very indiscreet and would have hurt the Emperor tremendously and we want to do him all the harm possible. It contains a terrific arraignment of the Roman Catholic Church."

Mr. Ellsworth then recited the allusions to Mr. Taft and to Archbishop Ireland, after which he told more regarding the final disposition of the sheets.

"One of them," he said, "was given to the Germanic Museum. Only recently I wrote to a United State Senator, calling his attention to the fact and asking that he obtain the interview for publication. But I read today that the paper has disappeared, and as Kuno Francke, a German of Germans, was the curator, it stands to reason that an ardent man like him would not permit such a document to remain where it could harm the Fatherland.

"I have heard that there is another copy extant, and if there is it seems to be the duty of the owner to produce it and have the contents published. For it would do incalculable harm to the German Emperor, especially with his present ally, Austria, because of the attack on the Catholic Church."

NOT FOUND AT HARVARD.

Dr. Francke to be Asked About Copy of Hale Article in Germanic Museum

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 10.—The Harvard University authorities are not in a position to state whether the much-sought-after copy of William Bayard Hale's article on his interview with the Kaiser is in the archives of the Germanic Museum or not. No effort has been made as yet to ascertain its whereabouts in that building, and before such an undertaking is started permission will be asked of Professor Emeritus Kuno Francke, honorary curator of the museum, who is now living in Gilbertville, N. Y.

Both President Lowell and his predecessor, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, stated today that no such article was deposited with the Harvard University to their knowledge. Jerome D. Greene of New York, Secretary to both Presidents at that time, also remembers no such gift. The archives of the university library have been carefully scrutinized by Archibald C. Coolidge, the Director, and William C. Lane, the Librarian, but no data concerning the article can be found. Neither President Lowell nor Dr. Eliot believes that Dr. Francke destroyed the interview if it really did reach the Germanic Museum.

HEAVY FALL OF SNOW CHECKS ITALY'S FOES

Operations at Front Slacken and Northward Communications Are Almost Cut Off.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Wednesday, Jan. 9, (Associated Press.)—The Winter campaign of the Teutons appears to have been interrupted seriously, if not halted definitely, by heavy snowfalls in the last twenty-four hours. The snow covers the mountain front to a depth of three to five feet.

Monte Grappa, the central point of operations between the Piave and the Brenta Rivers, has three feet of snow, while further north positions occupied by the enemy are buried to a much greater depth. The snow barrier is operating strongly against the enemy, as they are on the higher summits, while the Italians are on the lower ground sloping toward the plain.

On Monte Grappa, which is the dominating summit held by the Italians, and on Monte Pertica and Monte Caprile, near by, held by the enemy, the cannonade fell off today and there was little activity beyond patrol movements. Most of the soldiers are busy clearing the mountain paths so as to permit the steady movement of supplies. Huge tractor snowplows are being used and sleuges are taking the place of trucks for carrying food and munitions.

In addition to the interruption at the immediate front, the heavy snowfall may close the enemy's line of communication from Austria southward into Italy. The principal route runs through the Stelvio, an Alpine pass, and has a railway down to Trent and thence to Primolano, which is only ten miles from Monte Grappa and the fighting front. It is this route which has been open up to this time and has given the enemy direct communication to the front.

While the lower section is not blocked, indications are that Stelvio pass, the vital link in the route, is blocked by ten to fifteen feet of snow. The Stelvio is the highest pass in Europe, exceeding 9,000 feet, and connects the Adige Valley of Austria with the Adda Valley in Italy. Snows in that section are commonly followed by avalanches which further block the valleys and available outlets.

The enemy's eastern communications into the Friuli region are similarly, but it is believed not as seriously, affected. The railway line, running southward along the upper Piave, is blocked by heavy snows and avalanches. Further east the route to Gorizia, which passes through the trans-Alpine pass of Feistritz, is snowbound, but two other routes across the Carso range are less affected.

The indications are that the enemy will be unable to carry on any large operations, particularly on the mountain front, while his communications are snowbound.

ROME, Jan. 10.—The official communication from general headquarters today says:

The artillery struggle generally is not intense, but became more violent at intervals east of the Brenta. Our reconnoissance parties captured prisoners west of Col di Sotto, and provoked a long reactionary fire by the enemy. At Grave di Papadopoli hostile working and armed parties were dispersed.

Hostile trench mortars in the neighborhood of St. Dona were silenced by our batteries.

U-BOATS USE GUNS MOST FOR SINKINGS

Super-Submarines Now Carry Weapons Ready to Fire on Emerging.

7 OR 8 DOING WHOLE WORK

Ireland Roused to Intense Anger by Recent Sinking of Two Steamers Off Her Coast.

LONDON, Jan. 10—(Associated Press.)—The submarine warfare has gradually taken on a new phase since wintry weather set in. Submarines of the cruiser type are now doing most of the sinkings, while the smaller submarines are apparently confining their work largely to mine laying.

The reason for this shift is that small submarines are not good surface craft in stormy seas, while the cruiser type has proven wonderfully seaworthy, being more manageable than even the modern torpedo boat destroyer in heavy weather.

These cruiser submarines carry two 5.9 guns and sixteen torpedoes and can remain at sea six weeks. The Germans have built a considerable number of these since the first one visited American waters, but so many have been lost that there are now not more than seven or eight operating. These, however, are manned by the pick of the German navy and their power for harm is shown by the fact that these seven or eight vessels are able to keep up the heavy toll of sinkings.

A considerable number of recent sinkings have been accomplished by gunfire. The cruiser submarines no longer carry guns of the old type, which folded into the body of the craft when it submerged and had to be unfolded before the U-boat could get into action. The new guns are known as "wet guns," being constructed of material which sea water does not harm. They are mounted on stationary platforms and can be fired the instant the deck of the U-boat is above water.

Destroyer Battles With U-Boat.

An American destroyer had an encounter with one of these cruisers a few days ago. The German was trying to sink three merchantmen from a range of four miles and had fired about thirty shots when the destroyer appeared on the horizon, attracted by the sound of guns.

The destroyer opened fire at six miles. The U-boat, however, was lying with decks almost awash and was a difficult target, and as the American sped toward her at full speed she submerged suddenly. The smoking muzzles of her guns disappeared only an instant after their last shots had been fired.

"The Americans were unable to destroy the U-boat, but they escorted two of the three merchantmen safely to port after having rescued the crew of the third, which was already sinking.

If not convoyed merchantmen have a small chance against these super-submarines. Little fishing vessels, which the Germans do not disdain to attack at every opportunity, are still helpless. Yesterday morning the unarmed British fishing trawler Premier was at its peaceful work with nets in the North Sea during a snowstorm when a U-boat appeared on the surface a thousand yards off and sent two six-inch shells into the hull of the ninety-ton boat.

The trawler turned turtle from the shock. The crew of twelve jumped into the water and then climbed up on the overturned hulk. The submarine came up leisurely to within a stone's throw of the wreck, as if to take the men off, but seemingly thought better of this and submerged without a word from anybody on board. The crew of the trawler was rescued several hours later. One man died, and the others suffered from exposure.

Ireland Aroused by Sinkings.

Southeast Ireland has been thrown into mourning during the last fortnight by the work of submarines, which have sunk two steamers, the crews of which were mainly Irishmen, seventy of whom perished. The catastrophe is called in Ireland "The first declaration of war by the Germans against Ireland," and has aroused a wave of indignation throughout the Emerald Isle. Ireland also is feeling the submarine warfare acutely owing to a coal famine, due to submarine sinking three boats bringing to Ireland the coal for which she is dependent upon England.

Mine-laying submarines have been active in the Mediterranean the past month. Here the heavy weather has been no friend of the Allies, for it hampers mine-sweeping. Nevertheless shipping has to go on just the same.

The weather is also against the Allies in a continuance of aviation work against submarines. For two months the vacillating barometer has not permitted much use to be made of the aviation arm, which was responsible during the Summer and Autumn for a considerable number of submarines being destroyed.

It is a remarkable fact that during the war only nine British transports have been sunk, with a loss of less than 2,000 lives, although frequently 250,000 soldiers are at sea on a single day, and altogether more than 11,000,000 men have been transported safely by water.

You're a regular purchasing agent, aren't you?

Do you subscribe for a trade paper? Why don't you? Most good purchasing agents do.

Did you know that one of the best known baby foods failed in 178 out of 470 tests, not because there was anything wrong about the food, the trouble was inside the babies. The food bought for them still further upset their poor little "tummies." But how could the mothers know?

Mothers asked so many questions of the same publishers for so many years that The Mother's Magazine came into being. They asked about everything under the sun. Whom did they ask?

They wrote to the publishing company of David Cook, which for more than two generations had been publishing Sunday School literature for the whole United States. They wrote because they had supreme confidence in the integrity of the house.

Their questions necessitated an infinite amount of research. The information piled up as the mothers and housekeepers kept calling for it. It became easier to publish "The Mother's Magazine" than to answer the constantly repeated queries.

Edited by a staff of distinguished specialists, it maintains for its readers a research bureau and library, a service for 5,000 women's clubs, and mothers' associations all over the United States.

More than half a million mothers already avail themselves of this specialized home service.

Not a single issue of The Mother's Magazine goes out that is not instrumental in making good homes better.

The Mother's Magazine is for sale on the newsstands for 15c.

BERLIN CONDITIONS 'ABSOLUTELY AWFUL'

Observer Reaching London Declares Masses Lack Clothing and Fuel as Well as Food.

BITTER TOWARD WAR LORDS

Able-Bodied Men Kept Away from the Capital for Fear They Might Start a Revolt.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—From a source which it can vouch for as entirely trustworthy, The Morning Post says it is able to give the following account of conditions in Berlin. The statement, which is made by an observer at first hand, who only left Germany in the middle of December, reads:

"The situation in Berlin is absolutely awful. For the great mass of the population there hardly is any light, warmth, clothing, or boots, and an appalling lack of food. The work of the city is carried on by decrepit men and by women, who are reduced to nearly the same condition. The linen worn by both sexes is abominably dirty, for there is no soap to wash it. There is intensely bitter feeling among the people against the Government. Undoubtedly there would be a revolt but for the fact—as the people are always saying—women cannot make a revolution.

"The Government knows all of this and forbids able-bodied men returning to Berlin from the front. Officers are allowed to return there only in exceptional circumstances. Hindenburg is loathed by the people of Berlin. Placards with a picture of Hindenburg, and urging the population to subscribe to the loans, to hold out, &c., are torn down by the people of Berlin, although in South Germany they are not touched at all. Over Berlin little notices are posted up offering a reward of 3,000 marks to any one giving information of persons who say anything against the Government, the Emperor, the war, or the officers.

"The population of Berlin is divided, roughly, into three classes—the upper military class, which adores Hindenburg and hates Ludendorff; the middle class, which loves Ludendorff because he gives high posts in the army to Jews, and the lower working class, which loathes Hindenburg, Ludendorff, and especially the Emperor. This latter class ridicules the Crown Prince unmercifully. Otherwise nobody speaks of the imperial family, which has ceased to be a dominant factor.

"The well-to-do classes get along fairly comfortably because the necessaries of life can be purchased if one can afford to give fabulous sums for them. A ham, for example, can be bought for £14, ($70.)

"The news is circulated sub rosa among the officers that as a result of the recent fire or explosion at Krupps 250 new airplanes were destroyed."

Lieut. Ely, Aviator, Killed in France

Lieutenant William S. Ely, Aviation Section, U. S. R., was killed in France on Jan. 2, according to word received yesterday at his home in Rochester. Lieutenant Ely was a son of the late Dr. and Mrs. William S. Ely of Rochester and was 22 years old. A memorial service will be held on Friday afternoon at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Rochester. Lieutenant Ely was graduated from Harvard in 1917 and sailed for Europe in July to complete his training in aviation.

CHINATOWN'S MAYOR DEAD.

Tom Lee Was a Factional Leader in the Old Tong Feuds.

All Chinatown last night mourned the death of Tom Lee, its Mayor. Lee, who was 76 years old, was one of the well-known figures of Chinatown. He was the leader of the On Leon Tongs, who for years waged war with the Hip Sing Tongs. As a result of these Tong wars, which were bitterly waged in Chinatown, more than fifty Chinamen and three white men were killed. Chinatown in those days was the rendezvous for outcast whites and Orientals, who maintained gambling houses and opium dives. It was for the prestige of running these places that the rival bands fought. The Four Brothers Society was formed, and Tom Lee moved to the Bronx to await developments. Just before he moved an alarm clock, which was near his bed, was shot to pieces. The same night a Chinese actor, a friend of Tom's, was shot to death at a performance at the Chinese Theatre. Judge Warren W. Foster of the Court of General Sessions brought the rival actions together and a peace pact was signed.

Tom Lee's wife, who was a white woman, died several months ago. Lee is survived by two sons, one an actor on the American stage and the other a missionary in China. Death was due to a complication of diseases. The On Leon Tongs took charge of the body of their chief. No definite funeral arrangements have been made.

Lee, who lived at 18 Mott Street, was one of the oldest celestial residents in Chinatown.

GERMANS AT METROPOLITAN

Rome Paper Thinks It Sees a Change of Opera Policy.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Jan. 10.—The Idea Nazionale today publishes an interview which its correspondent had with Signor Gatti-Casazza in New York, wherein the opera director demonstrates that no German operas have been given at the Metropolitan this season, except three, by Mozart, Flotow, and Liszt, two of which have been sung in Italian and the third in English.

The impresario says that few members of the former German company at the Metropolitan are still engaged there, two of these being Bodanzky and Hempel. Both of these are in process of becoming American citizens, the conductor's final papers being held up by law during the war, while the prima donna's case is not necessarily so delayed, since she is about to marry an American.

Commenting on the interview, the Idea Nazionale says:

"Our readers will be able to convince themselves by this interview that the statement made by Gatti-Casazza does not in any way affect what we published about the Metropolitan, which is only now changing its policy."

After saying that it is interesting to learn that Bodanzky and Hempel are becoming American citizens, the Idea Nazionale says:

"These are explanations which only bear weight with those interested to believe them, but not for us who know the changing virtues of Austro-Germans of both sexes. Bodanzky may be a Slav from Prague, in which case he is a renegade Bohemian, as no Bohemian today proud of his nationality can feel sympathy for Austria, which tyrannizes over Bohemia."

Trucks that the nation must have—Saving—at LEAST COST—the time and money still being wasted in moving goods from point to point

Mr. Dealer—
Be Sure to Visit
Maxwell Headquarters at the Biltmore
Truck Show
at Maxwell Showrooms
Broadway & 59th.

—At least cost. Keep your mind on that, as the essential detail. Gasoline, man-power, rubber and money must not be wasted; economy now is an imperative part of national efficiency. The truck that does a motor truck's full work,—with adequate capacity and adequate capabilities—with least gas, rubber, attention and expense,—is the most efficient truck. The country needs all the trucks of that kind that can be produced, hundreds of thousands of them. Any truck which uses more gasoline, more tire, more attention or more expense, than that minimum, is wasteful and cannot justify its existence now. The line is going to be drawn sharply. For one-ton work, there can be only one truck of maximum efficiency and economy. That truck is the Maxwell. We have the proof of it—not in mere show-time assertions, but in the recorded testimony of its users. . . . . . . We will be glad to talk business with you.

HEAVY AUTO DEMAND IN SOUTH AMERICA

Show at the Palace Also Reveals That Scandinavians Look to Us for Supply.

ELECTRICS MOST NEEDED

Jump in Popularity Due to Low Running Cost and Improvement in Models.

What the war has done for the American automobile industry was exemplified yesterday at the show in the Grand Central Palace by the presence of several representatives from European and South American countries, prepared to place contracts for the shipment of large numbers of passenger motor vehicles. America is now the only country to which foreigners can look for any large supply of automobiles, and a big increase in exports is assured as soon as better shipping facilities are available.

Due to the scarcity of gasoline in Europe, there has been an exceptionally heavy demand during the last year in the Scandinavian countries, and also in England, for electric cars. There is plenty of electricity there, and a trade representative from Norway said yesterday that several hundred American electric vehicles could be sold at once in that country if it were possible to ship them. He has ordered 100 Rauch & Lang electric broughams, selling for $3,000 here, and when they arrive in Norway they will be eagerly taken, he said, at $5,500. He has made arrangements to ship forty of them within the next two weeks. The same makers have lately sent ten of their new taxicabs to Japan.

The electric automobile has had a wonderful jump in popularity during the last three years. Four electric companies are exhibiting at the show, and the manager of one concern estimated that more than 50,000 passenger electric vehicles are now in use in the United States, last year showing an increase of 15,000 over the preceding year. Chicago is the largest user of electrics of any city in the world, about 10,000 being in use there for passenger service, of which about 700 are taxicabs. Electric taxicabs are also in general use in Detroit, Cleveland, St. Louis, and other Western cities.

The Rauch & Lang Company shows two models, the four-passenger brougham and a five-passenger coach selling for $3,200. The other exhibiting makes are the Ohio, Milburn, and the Detroit Electric. The Milburn favors the gasoline car style for the body, the batteries being beneath a long hood which is equipped with a radiator giving it the appearance of a high-powered gasoline vehicle. Their average is 100 miles on a charge of electricity, and they can speed up to 25 or 28 miles an hour. The low operating cost is the prime advantage of the electrics.

One of the big crowds, both afternoon and evening, was around the Studebaker cars, attracted by the new light four chassis and the chummy roadster, an entirely new model on the light six-cylinder chassis, 119 weelbase. The new mechanical features of the Studebaker cars this season involve the placing of the transmission amidships from the rear axle, a disk absorber between the transmission and flywheel, eliminating the shocks from the motor. Although the chummy roadster is not yet ready for delivery four sales have been closed this week. It sells for $1,450. The seven-passenger touring car, 126-inch wheelbase, sells for $1,695.

Among the multi-cylinders which are attracting attention are the new Hal models, shown in three body styles on the big 135-inch chassis, providing roomy accommodations for the seven-passenger limousine and the family touring car carrying the same number. There is also a four-passenger roadster of striking design and finish. One of the features which add to the operating convenience is the locating of the power tire pump below the driver's seat. The key which throws it into gear comes up through the floor into a special compartment under the driving seat. To inflate the tires all that is necessary is to raise the seat cushion, pull out the hose, attach it to the tire, and pull a little lever. When the tire is inflated, a slight push on the lever shuts off the pump, and the hose can then be easily put into its compartment. The touring models sell for $3,600, the sedan for $4,500, and the limousine for $5,000.

The Oakland shows two new closed car models, a unit body sedan and a coupé, both of the popular convertible type, providing a quick transformation to an open car, with the exception of the roof top. The new Oaklands are upholstered in grey, the sedan has staggered doors and individual front seats. The season's models include six body types, among them being an attractive touring sedan, a three-passenger roadster, and a five-passenger touring car, all mounted on the six-cylinder chassis.

The Harroun custom-built body roadster is one of the new small cars in the show. It is equipped on the standard four-cylinder chassis, 106-inch wheel base and sells for $1,605, a higher price, owing to its more expensive body, than the five-passenger touring car, one of the very reasonable cars of that type selling for $785.

Few of the visitors who have admired the ninety horse-power Roamer-Duesenberg car, one of the latest things of the season, realized that its production had been threatened with extinction a few days ago when the Government took over the Duesenberg motor factory for the manufacture of Liberty motor airplane engines. It was announced yesterday that a smaller factory has been secured in the West where the Duesenberg engine will continue to be made. The engines were used in many of the racing machines last season and as equipped in the new Roamers the motor will contain all the features of the racing type. The touring car with this engine sells for $2,950.

There is a patriotic War Savings Stamp booth on the third floor in charge of several young women affiliated with the National War Savings Committee, and who devote several hours a day to selling the war stamps. Their energy combined with their good looks has been productive of over $400 worth of sales.

Today will be Suburban and Ladies' Day at the show.

KENYON DEFENDS TROOPS.

Denounces Stories of Drunkenness —Calls for Unity to Push War

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who recently returned from the battle front in Europe, made a speech in the Senate today, and in the course of it he denounced the reports of drunkenness among American troops abroad. He urged Americans not to repeat the stories, branding them as unfounded and intended to divert their attention from prosecution of the war.

"General Pershing can look after that better than you or I," the Senator said. "He does not want a drunken or diseased army. Let's quit this and leave the matter to Pershing."

Senator Kenyon warned against Germany's peace offers and the stories that the country was exhausted.

Pointing to the fact that it took England two years or more to get ready to fight, he held that there was no reason for gloom in this country now, but added that "the saddest words this nation can ever write, if it fails in this emergency by reason of delay, will be the words 'too late.'

"We must bring to the western front 2,000,000 men and have 1,000,000 in reserve," the Senator said. "We must do it as quickly as possible. We must cut red tape, stop quarreling about the guns and like things, and carry this thing through on businesslike principles. It is not a time for partisanship nor politics, and I may say it is no time for inefficiency in any department of our Government."

Senator Kenyon said that in this "spirit of non-partisanship" he would like to see a coalition Cabinet.

CHICAGO, Jan. 10.—The United States Army is the cleanest now in Europe, according to Dr. W. T. Foster, President of Reed College, who visited the entire French front as representative of the War Council of the Red Cross. In an address in Chicago today he said:

"I visited every camp in France where American soldiers are quartered, and I never saw any drunkenness. The morals of the American soldiers are good, too."

Mann and Bernard to be Co-Stars.

Louis Mann and Sam Bernard, it was announced yesterday, are soon to be seen as co-stars in a comedy entitled "Our Friendly Enemies," written by Samuel Shipman and Aaron Hoffman. The play, which deals with a phase of the war, will have its New York première early in February. It is being produced by A. H. Woods.

HELD FOR TRIAL AS SUGAR PROFITEER

Prayer Book Dealer Will Be First to Face Criminal Prosecution Under Federal Law.

The first criminal prosecution asked for by the New York City Federal Food Board was undertaken yesterday when United States Commissioner Hitchcock held in $2,500 bail Pincus Friedman of 172 Rivington Street, a dealer in prayer shawls and prayer books. It is alleged that Friedman was dealing in sugar, and the specific complaint against him is that he acted as a wholesale dealer without a Federal license.

Two weeks ago the Food Board received a complaint that Friedman was operating in sugar and that he was taking orders at his book store. Secret Service agents were put on the case, and it was found, the Government alleges, that the dealer in prayer shawls was receiving consignments of sugar from New Orleans. P. A. Johann, in charge of the investigation here, visited the store and seized letters which are alleged to indicate that Friedman had received at least 20,000 pounds of sugar. One letter from the Morgan Line advised Friedman that he must remove from Pier 49, North River, before Jan. 9, twenty barrels of sugar that had arrived on the steamship Creole. It is also said that Friedman received sixty-eight barrels on the steamship Pasco.

John Mitchell, head of the board, ordered that all sugar found in Friedman's store be seized. A third consignment of eighty barrels and twenty packets of sugar is also said to have arrived for Friedman.

Yesterday the regulation of the Food Board requiring that retailers label certain goods as to grade and price went into effect, and reports received by the board indicate that the dealers are complying.

Summer Delicacies in January That Reduce Year-'Round Table Expenses

THE old theory was that to serve "seasonable" foods out-of-season symbolized luxurious living. The modern housewife knows better. She understands that by so doing, she is aiding to reduce the cost of living. For, thereby, she is helping maintain markets that offer an inducement to conserve perishable foods during months when they are grown—assisting to keep down the average year-'round cost of table requirements.

THIS is far more than her acceptance of the Food Administration's plan; it is far-sighted common sense.

How Housewives Can Help

THUS, she is making possible the building of cold storage plants in every locality—adequate reservoirs for storing foods when they are produced in plenty to be distributed later when they are needed. And she is willing to do this; for, she has come to comprehend the real function and significance of cold-storage; she understands that foods which go into cold-storage in good condition will remain so—that the foods which come unfit out of the cold-storage plant are those which had been held too long for sale before being put there. And she knows, moreover, that foods so stored are not held indefinitely—that the steady piling up of interest and insurance charges demands that they be released to the market long before the next crop.

Perhaps, this year, when foods are higher than usual, housewives appreciate more fully the service which such an organization as that of Armour and Company provides. For, not alone does Armour collect foods at their choicest where Nature produces them best, not only does Armour transport them under refrigeration to where they are most needed, but Armour also stores them scientifically—under conditions which are ideal and which insure perfect keeping.

No Feast—No Famine

THUS, if you will think it over, you will see that what Armour is really doing for you is to equalize the national food supply over both the country and the seasons so that nothing will be lost—so there will not be a glut at one period of the year and prohibitively high prices at another.

If you will consider the facts carefully, you will find in them the reason why for assured quality always, it will pay you to ask your dealer for Armour's food products.

ACCEPTS HYLAN'S BID FOR TEST OF B. R. T.

Travis H. Whitney of Public Service Board to Travel with Mayor for Week.

NEW COMPLAINT TO STRAUS

Mayor Arrives at City Hall at 9:20 o'Clock After Spending More Than an Hour on Way.

Complaining again of what he termed "deplorable conditions," on the Brooklyn Rapid Transit lines, Mayor Hylan, after he had arrived twenty minutes late at the City Hall yesterday morning, sent a letter to Chairman Oscar S. Straus of the Public Service Commission, inviting any member of the commission to meet him about 8 o'clock every morning for a week at the Gates Avenue station and travel over the line to New York personally to get acquainted with the B. R. T. situation. Commissioner Travis H. Whitney accepted the invitation and said he would be on hand at the Gates Avenue station at the requisite hour, beginning next Monday morning.

The Mayor in his letter to Chairman Straus, giving his reasons for not arriving at the City Hall until 9:20 o'clock yesterday morning, said:

> I take the liberty to again write you about the deplorable condition of the elevated lines in Brooklyn. I arrived at the Gates Avenue station at 8 A. M. today, and after waiting nine minutes I finally was able to crowd my way into one of the cars, which was dangerously overcrowded. After the train left the station and made one or two stops it was announced that the next stop would be the Bowery. We finally arrived at Canal Street and there had to change cars and get into another train. Women and young girls, together with men, were so huddled and crowded that they were on the verge of fainting. From the time I started from the Gates Avenue station to my arrival at Chambers Street it took just 1 hour and 4 minutes.
> I ask you to have a member of the commission meet me at about 8 o'clock at the Gates Avenue station for a week and travel over this line and see what the people are obliged to put up with.
> I believe that you personally are earnestly interested in giving the people relief, and I know that if you were to experience the condition as it prevails on these lines you would agree with me that it is disgraceful and would do all in your power to effect a remedy. I say frankly that it would be absolutely dangerous for a man of your age to make this trip standing in one of these trains, where the air if foul and with so little ventilation.

In explaining why he could not ride with the Mayor today, Mr. Whitney said that he had to journey to Washington, there to meet Mr. Straus, where a conference with the authorities was necessary in an effort to obtain priorities so that steel might be obtained for the completion of certain portions of the dual system of rapid transit. This work, he stated, was practically at a standstill, due to lack of steel and other material.

Mr. Whitney declared that everything possible to relieve congestion on the transit lines was being done, and that the Public Service Commission was even taking the chance of accident in order to relieve congestion.

LIMIT OF LIVING WAGES.

Labor Chief Puts it at $4.50 a Day for a Family of Five.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—In a statement supported by statistics, Edward L. Keenan, President of the Central Labor Union, told the National Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board today that the head of a family of five must make more than $4.50 a day to support his family.

The food bill of a family of five, under prevailing price schedules, Keenan said, could not possibly be figured at less than $12.14 a week.

Keenan was Chairman of a committee which made a canvass to determine food prices and other expenses the industrial workers must meet.

Including housing, fuel, lighting, and other necessary expenses, as well as insurance and doctors' fees, Keenan's figures purported to show that it would cost a family of five $1,442.80 a year to exist.

The True Reason the Millbrook Woolen Mills Took Government Work

Recent statements reflecting upon the integrity and good faith of the Millbrook Woolen Mills in connection with government contracts are so willfully incorrect that we desire to issue the following statement:

We brand as unqualifiedly false and malicious the allegation that the Millbrook Woolen Mills was favored in the award of government contracts.

In undertaking government contracts the Millbrook Woolen Mills has not only done so without thought of "extravagant" profits, as has been alleged, but has done so at a sacrifice due to enforced curtailing of its regular business with the civilian trade. When we undertook our government contracts we had recorded sufficient orders from our civilian accounts to cover our entire production.

These civilian orders were at prices that assured a profit far in excess of that on government work.

Nevertheless, actuated solely by a desire to do our share of patriotic work, we relinquished a percentage of civilian orders that we might undertake work urgently needed by the government at prices fixed by the government.

Moreover, our mill records, which are open to inspection, will prove that the cost of labor since we undertook government work has been advanced no less than 48% (within a period of eight months) while it is common knowledge that the cost of all raw materials entering into the manufacture of cloth has increased enormously. Despite these facts the original government prices have not been advanced.

From the very outset we did our best to make deliveries to our civilian accounts. When we received urgent written requests from the War Department to hasten and even anticipate deliveries of government cloth, so that our soldiers might be speedily appareled, it became inevitable that civilian deliveries be deferred.

We were ordered by the War Department to defer civilian deliveries.

Despite these handicaps, we succeeded in completing a considerable number of our civilian orders, at the same time making deliveries to the government.

The demands of the trade for immediate deliveries became so insistent and threatening, that to accede to them would have meant complete stoppage of government work, whereupon a commandeer order was issued by the War Department.

We unqualifiedly deny that the Millbrook Woolen Mills has, directly or indirectly, at any time received or used any goods, clippings, wool or other raw material from the Base Sorting Plant, or from any other governmental agency.

When the Millbrook Woolen Mills was awarded its first government contract on May 11, 1917, Mr. Samuel M. Kaplan, now a member of the Committee on Supplies, had no connection with any department of the government, and accordingly could not have been and was not instrumental in recommending the award of any contract, as has been alleged.

Later, when we undertook additional government contracts, none of the same were recommended by or through him, and we further deny most emphatically that he has now or ever had any connection, financial or otherwise, direct or indirect, with the Millbrook Woolen Mills.

Any statements contrary to the facts herein set forth are necessarily based on misinformation or are malicious in their origin and are harmful because false, unjust and libelous.

New York, January 10, 1918. MILLBROOK WOOLEN MILLS.

MINOR LEAGUES ASK RELIEF FROM FINANCIAL PRESSURE

MINOR LEAGUES ASK FOR A MORATORIUM

Request Placed Before National Commission to Enable Clubs to Continue.

PLAN VIEWED FAVORABLY

Release from Debts, with Guarantee of Payment After War, May Solve Bush Baseball Woes.

In order to prevent a general suspension of minor league baseball next Summer, the minors have requested the National Commission to declare a moratorium for the period of the war. The request was made at Cincinnati Wednesday by John H. Farrell, Secretary of the National Association of Minor Leagues, and Harry Stahlhefer, President of the Central League. It was the opinion of the minor league officials that unless the minors were released temporarily from the financial obligations incurred during the last two seasons many of them would be unable to open their gates next Summer.

Secretary Farrell informed the commission that the minor leagues were not trying to dodge their financial troubles, but asked for a moratorium so that new capital could be interested in minor league territory and operate many of the clubs during the coming Summer. Ten minor leagues, mostly the lower class organizations, had to suspend last season before the season was finished. There are ten other leagues which finished the season, many of them incurring heavy losses.

These leagues state that if they are forced to meet their financial obligations before another season starts they will be unable to operate this year. If, however, the payment of the debts assumed last season can be temporarily postponed until the end of the war the minor league officials declare that they will be able to pay all their bills.

In many of the minor leagues throughout the country there are prospective buyers of clubs who are willing to take a chance to operate, but they do not want to assume the debts the clubs made last season.

The National Commission has taken the plea of the minors under advisement and has shown a disposition to grant the moratorium, so that baseball in the minors may survive during the coming season. By declaring the moratorium the commission will assume the responsibilities of the past debts of the minors and will see that all obligations are met after the war is over.

Since the minor league convention in Louisville in November the clubs have been at a loss to know what to do for next season. Minor league baseball has never been a very prosperous business proposition, but the club owners are not able to stand another season as disastrous as last year.

M. H. Sexton of Little Rock, President of the National Association, has called a conference of minor league club owners at Chicago on Jan. 15, when the answer of the National Commission on the moratorium request will be made known.

The schedule of Spring games between the Yankees and the Boston Braves was completed yesterday, when games were arranged at Macon, Ga., and Dublin, Ga. The New York club is anxious to play in Dublin because last year the two teams were prevented from playing there on account of rain. Also a minister at Dublin objected to the visit of the major league clubs to that town, and on the Sunday before the game was scheduled he prayed for rain and it did rain.

The Yankees' schedule includes nearly all of the big military cantonments in the South, and is as follows: April 1, Camp Wheeler at Macon, Ga.; 2, Dublin; 3, Camp Hancock at Augusta, Ga.; 4, Orangeburg, S. C.; 5, Camp Jackson at Columbia, S. C.; 6, Camp Sevier at Greenville, S. C.; 8, Camp Wadsworth at Spartanburg, S. C.; 9, Camp Greene at Charlotte, N. C.; 10, Greenboro, N. C.; 11, Camp Lee at Petersburg, Va., and 12, 13, and 15, Brooklyn at Ebbets Field.

Secretary John A. Heydler of the National League returned yesterday from the National Commission meeting at Cincinnati and denied the rumor which was started in that city that President John K. Tener had resigned. The National League committee which was appointed to fix President Tener's salary has made a satisfactory report to the league. It is understood that the cut which was made in President Tener's yearly remuneration met with his approval, and that the league expects that he will serve out his year's term giving the organization only such time as is not taken by his private business interests.

Secretary Heydler also announced the make-up of the committee which will go to Washington next week to confer with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on the war tax on baseball admissions. The committee includes the members of the National Commission, Messrs. Tener, Johnson, and Herrmann; Secretary Heydler, John B. Foster of the Giants, Walter Hapgood of the Boston Braves, and Ben Minor, President of the Washington Club.

After the Washington meeting, the Schedule Committee of both leagues will go to Dover Hall to draw up the season's dates. Secretary Heydler stated that the baseball officials believe that railroad conditions will adjust themselves before April, and that the club will have little trouble in transportation. In making up the schedule, allowance will be made in all the jumps for late trains. The hardest jump in the National League schedule is between Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and there will be a minimum of these trips during the coming season.

Chairman August Herrmann of the National Commission in his annual report, which was read at Cincinnati, had the following to say about the game's future: "Professional baseball has proved its patriotism whenever and wherever possible, and those engaged in it stand ready to respond promptly and fully to the country's call, whether for service or for sacrifice. The popular demand for the maintenance of America's national game during the world war, which has the approval of the Government, will be complied with. In my judgment, the high standard of play will be maintained in the major leagues, and the attendance at games will be of such proportions as to put pessimists to confusion.

"It may be difficult to replace some of the players who are doing their bit abroad or are in preparation for active service, but I am confident that the American and National League teams of 1918 will be equipped with talent, and I have no doubt that the game will be more than self-supporting in the major league cities."

Catcher George Gibson signed his contract with the Giants yesterday and will again be the first lieutenant of McGraw's board of strategy during the coming season.

Eppa Rixey Gets Commission.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Eppa Rixey, left-handed pitcher of the Philadelphia Nationals, who lives at Charlottesville, Va., has been commissioned a First Lieutenant in the Sanitary Corps of the national army.

Eddie Cicotte Sends In Contract.

DETROIT, Jan. 10.—Eddie Cicotte, star pitcher for the Chicago Americans, announced today that he had signed his 1918 contract. Cicotte's home is in Detroit.

Cochran Is Twice Victor.

Welker Cochran defeated Thomas Gallagher in both games of their three-cushion billiard match at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. In the afternoon he triumphed over the veteran by a score of 40 to 24, completing his string in fifty-two innings. His best run for this session was 4. In the evening game Cochran was the victor at 40 to 28. Cochran made a high run of 6 in this contest. Each player has now won four games.

HARVARD CLUB BEATS YALE.

Makes Clean Sweep of Class A Squash Tennis Matches.

With a much stronger team than in any of the past matches of the series, the Harvard Club squash tennis players defeated the Yale Club representatives in the Class A Metropolitan League team matches on the Harvard Club courts yesterday, winning every one of the seven events against the Blue.

The Columbia Club and the combined team from the Princeton Club and the Squash Club clashed in the other match at the Squash Club. The Princeton-Squash representatives carried off the laurels, but only because an even break in actual play was turned to their favor by the default of H. Bulkley of the Columbia Club. This gave the Princeton squash team a 4 to 3 victory.

The Harvard Club team which faced Yale, while not nearly as strong as could have been placed on the courts, was more representative of the strength of the club than anything that has been brought together heretofore this season. Fillmore Van S. Hyde headed the team which repelled the invasion from the Yale Club. Following him were R. G. Coburn, J. Onatavia, Jr., and J. W. Appel, Jr, all proficient racquet wielders.

Hyde, who only recently won the handicap tournament, was pressed to a surprisingly close match by Donald Mackay of the Yale Club. Mackay was beaten in the first game at 15—7, but came back strong and outplayed Hyde during the second game much to the astonishment of the onlookers. In the final game, however, Hyde's remarkable ability at squash tennis was evidenced in its highest degree. He swept along rapidly and won at 15—3.

There was only one other three-game match played during the afternoon. In this D. F. Fox of the Harvard Club vanquished A. Adams, Jr., of the Yale Club at 17—16, 15—9, 15—12.

A match which promised a keen contest was that scheduled between J. W. Appel, the Harvard Club representative, and C. T. Cooney of the Yale Club. Cooney has been displaying a game of great strength recently, and was looked upon as a formidable foe for Appel. The Yale star was forced, however, to let the victory go to Appel by default.

The Princeton-Squash team and Columbia had a spirited struggle in their Class A match. F. S. Keeler, one of the Columbia Club stars, went down to defeat before the play of Dr. H. R. Mixsell of the Princeton Club at 15—8, 15—11.

R. L. Strebeigh, another of the prominent Columbia Club men, had difficulty in earning the decision over Dr. A. J. Mittendorf. The score of this encounter was 11—15, 15—11, 15—12.

The summaries:

Class A Team Matches.

HARVARD CLUB VS. YALE CLUB.

TO AID APPRENTICE RIDERS.

Jockey Club Makes More Liberal Allowance for Youngsters.

There will be a more liberal allowance for apprentice riders as a result of an amendment to the racing rules adopted at the annual meeting of The Jockey Club yesterday. The right of an apprentice to the five-pound allowance will depend on the ability he shows as a rider and will not be subject to the arbitrary rule that terminated an apprenticeship a year from the day on which a rider won his first race. The new rule as proposed by H. K. Knapp stipulates that boys are permitted during their apprenticeship to claim a five-pound allowance in all selling races, and a three-pound allowance in all overnight handicaps, provided no horse carries less than 84 pounds. They will be entitled to this allowance until they have ridden forty winners in any country.

Another change will have an important bearing on the distribution of the money accruing from the bidding up of winners in selling races. A year ago it was decided to divide this money among the winners of overnight events on the second day after the run-up. The amendment classifies an overnight race as one for which the entries close seventy-two hours in advance, instead of forty-eight hours, and will benefit the performers in minor handicaps. There were other changes in the rules for selling races, the most important being that to legalize the French claiming race plan by which horses may be claimed only before the race is run.

August Belmont is abroad on war duties, and the chair was taken by F. K. Sturgis. The other members present were Frank C. Bishop, Robert L. Gerry, F. G. Griswold, F. R. Hitchcock, H. K. Knapp, Andrew Miller, John Sanford, Joseph E. Widener, and William Woodward. August Belmont, F. K. Sturgis, and John Sanford were elected Stewards for the next two years. The financial reports of the Treasurer, and the report of the breeding bureau were approved.

The annual meeting of the Stewards followed and August Belmont was re-elected Chairman; F. K. Sturgis, Vice Chairman; H. K. Knapp, Secretary-Treasurer, and Algernon Daingerfield, Assistant Secretary. The appointment of Joseph E. Widener as Deputy Steward to represent August Belmont during Mr. Belmont's absence was confirmed.

Tommy McTaggart, who was set down last season, made an application for a jockey's license, but, with a similar application from M. Nathanson, it was referred to the License Committee.

HUNT ASSOCIATION MEETS.

Officers Re-elected at Annual Conclave of National Body.

All the officers of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association were re-elected at the annual meeting held at 18 East Forty-first Street yesterday. The stewards elected to serve until January, 1921, were H. S. Page, Captain J. E. Davis, and Captain F. S. von Stade. Major August Belmont is President of the association, H. S. Page Vice President, and Henry W. Bull Secretary-Treasurer. Frank J. Bryan was reappointed Secretary to the Hunts Committee and George W. Gall was reappointed to serve in a similar capacity for the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association. The following committees were appointed:

Executive—H. L. Higginson, Henry W. Bull, H. S. Page, Henry J. Morris, and Joseph E. Widener; Licenses—Henry J. Morris, H. S. Page, and Henry W. Bull; Courses—Henry J. Morris, H. S. Page, and H. L. Higginson; Rules—Henry W. Bull, Henry J. Morris, and H. L. Higginson.

Those named as representatives on the Hunts Committee were Captain F. S. von Stade, H. S. Page, and H. L. Higginson. S. Bryce Wing and James E. Maddux were elected members of the association.

Perry Belmont was re-elected President of the United Hunts Racing Association at the annual meeting of that body. Plans for the Spring meetings were discussed, and it was decided to have a renewal of the Double Event Steeplechase, which proved such a success last season. The officers elected were:

Perry Belmont, President; Captain F. S. von Stade, First Vice President; Captain L. E. Waring, Second Vice President; I. J. R. Muirling, Treasurer; H. A. Buck, Secretary. Directors—Morton L. Schwartz, Captain Joseph E. Davis, Captain C. L. Appleton, F. Ambrose Clark, and Captain L. E. Waring.

INGENUE IS FIRST IN RACE OVER ICE

Captures First Contest for State Pennant, Leading Fleet of Yachts by One Minute.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Jan. 10.—John Bates's Ingenue finished a twenty-mile race exactly one minute ahead of Frank Johnson's Princeton, winning the first leg on the State championship pennant for the North Shrewsbury Club. The race was sailed today in a west wind that at times blew a gale. The Ingenue's time was 39:20, although the windward work made the actual distance covered close to thirty miles.

The race was sailed eight times around the regular triangular course, which took the yachts down the river to Guyon's Point, across the river to Fisher's Cove, and back to the starting stake in front of the clubhouse. The Ingenue carried full sail and about 400 pounds weight. T. Irving Brown's Say When, the other defender, carried only a triple reefed mainsail and about 300 pounds of ballast. The Princeton of the Long Branch Club was double-reefed, carrying a jib and 350 pounds ballast. I. T. Strauss's Silver Heels, the other challenger, was double-reefed and had 300 pounds ballast.

The Ingenue won the post position and got away in the lead. After the first round of two and a half miles, she gained a lead of forty seconds over the Princeton, which she maintained throughout the race. Rube White handled the craft in fine style, and, after getting a good lead, never drove the yacht hard thereafter, he realizing that the full sail and heavy weight in the heavy wind was a great strain in itself, without pushing his flier.

The Say When, well handled by Mart Haviland, closely trailed the Princeton until the seventh round, when she withdrew after the race was practically won by the Ingenue. Ralph B. Sickels was unable to hold the Silver Heels to the ice in the heavy wind and withdrew after the second round. A large crowd witnessed the pretty race, and the next event is to be sailed tomorrow afternoon.

The summary:

STATE CHAMPIONSHIP PENNANT.

Start, 2:55.

Boat and Owner.	Finish.	Elapsed Time.
Ingenue, John Bates; sailed by Reuben White and Ensley White	3:34:20	39:20
Princeton, Frank Johnson; sailed by William Buxton and Clarence E. Green	3:35:20	30:20
Say When, T. Irving Brown, sailed by Mart Haviland, withdrew in seventh round.
Silver Heels, sailed by Ralph B. Sickels and Joseph Boskey, withdrew in third round.

McINNIS TRADED TO BOSTON

Last of Famous Athletics Turned Loose by Connie Mack.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—John Stuffy McInnis, first baseman and the last of Connie Mack's famous world's champions, goes to the Boston Americans in a straight trade for players. The names of the players and how many will come to Philadelphia in the trade were not announced.

Word that McInnis was to go to the Red Sox was received here tonight in a telegram from Connie Mack, who is at Jacksonville, Fla., arranging for the Spring training trip. No one in authority at club headquarters here has any information as to the details of the trade. It was said that Mack will pick the players he wants later and that the number will depend upon the men he selects.

Before leaving for the South Mack said that McInnis and other players would have to stand a reduction in salary.

McInnis has been a star on the Athletics team almost from the day he arrived in 1909. He was 27 years old last September. Prior to coming to the Philadelphia Americans he played with the New Bedford and Haverhill teams. McInnis succeeded Captain Harry Davis as first baseman and at once fitted in with Mack's star infield, the others being Eddie Collins, Jack Barry, and Frank Baker. In his first year with the team he batted .239, and in every succeeding season, with the exception of 1916, when his average was .295, he hit for more than .300.

COLUMBIA TO PLAY CORNELL

Blue and White In Better Shape for Basket Ball Game.

Columbia's basket ball five meets Cornell on the floor of the Morningside Heights gymnasium at 8 o'clock tonight. The ragged edges and the erraticness of the team play that were noticeable in the Penn game have disappeared during the practices held this week, and Columbia should be 25 per cent. a better team than that which played last week.

Coach Murray will probably start the same quintet as that which played the greater part of the Penn contest. Latour and Tomberg are the forwards, Alexander the centre, and Farer and Farrell the guards. Tommy Farrell will also do the shooting from the free throw line. For substitutes there are Jerry Newman, Sam Weinstein, and Dutch Vollmers, forward, centre, and guard respectively.

There is a good chance of there being a freshman basket ball team. Since the opening of college after the Christmas vacation, the yearlings have shown an usual interest in this sport and doubtlessly will put forth a representative five. At present Shafer and Ullman are guards; Condon is centre; and Stone and Stewart play at the forward positions.

VIDAL NEW ARMY CAPTAIN.

South Dakota Cadet to Succeed Oliphant as Football Leader.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 10.—Eugene L. Vidal of South Dakota has been elected Captain of the Army football team for 1918. Cadet Vidal gained fame in Eastern football circles during the season of 1916 when he played half back on the Army eleven of that year. He was idle last Fall because of a hazing episode.

Cadet Vidal is a member of the class of 1920. He is 22 years old and weighs 175 pounds. Before entering West Point he was at the University of South Dakota where he played basket ball, football and baseball. He is a leading basket ball player and has played centre on the Army court team for the last two seasons.

The Army will lose Elmer Oliphant, all-around athletic star when the class of 1919 graduates next August, ten months ahead of regular schedule. The former Purdue star is now playing hockey on the Army seven and is Captain of the Army baseball team.

PENN STATE SIGNS HARLOW.

Football Coach to Handle Eleven for Three Years.

STATE COLLEGE, Penn., Jan. 10.—Richard C. Harlow, resident football coach at Pennsylvania State for the last three years, today signed a contract to handle the Blue and White eleven for the next three seasons. He will have complete charge of the gridiron squad. Harlow will shortly begin indoor work with the material for next season's team.

Famous as a tackle on State's 1910 and 1911 teams, Harlow's name is familiar to all followers of Penn State athletics. His subsequent work as assistant coach under Bill Hollenback, brought him recognition as a close student of football tactics.

PIERCE-ARROW
The car of ultimate economy

The value of the Pierce-Arrow Car cannot be measured without considering two factors—the quality of the service given, and the length of time it continues. Its dependable service should be multiplied by the years that the service continues. Then the initial cost of a Pierce-Arrow becomes very low, the expenditure a wise investment, and the purchase a real economy.

ALL SPEAK FRENCH IN THIS REGIMENT

DRAWN FROM MANY CAMPS

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Jan. 10.—The Twenty-seventh Division today was practically stripped of soldiers who speak French as the result of an order which sent 150 men to Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C., to be re-enlisted in the First New Hampshire Infantry, part of Major Gen. Cameron's Fourth Division. It is said that the New Hampshire regiment is to be filled up entirely with French-speaking soldiers drafted from various camps. It is apparently the aim of the War Department, according to the best information available here, to form a regiment of interpreters.

The men who left here tonight, after successfully passing a rapid-fire examination supervised by Lieutenant Pierre Forrestier, 119th French Artillery, were mostly privates, with here and there a "non-com" sprinkled in. Among the 150 selected was Corporal Louis H. Wetmore of New York, Company G, 107th Infantry. Here is the list:

At the headquarters of Brig. Gen. Carleton, commanding the Pioneer Division, it was said that definite information concerning the expected arrival of the 25,000 men to fill the organization had not been received. It was admitted, however, that every effort was being made to prepare the camp for an early arrival.

Major Charles H. Rich reported today for duty with the Pioneers. It was announced that he would be promoted to be Lieutenant Colonel and appointed Quartermaster.

MUCK PLAYS PIANO IN BOSTON SYMPHONY

Conductor's Novel Performance as He Directs Wins Ovation—New York Symphony Matinee.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, making its third visit since the new war tax rules, the abbreviated tours, and the longer, inland travel, of an unusual season, appeared at Carnegie Hall last night with all its hundred men and with three instruments over the quota; three that were sent on and off like stars of the occasion, a celeste and glockenspiel in the newest of Ravel's dances for a Russian ballet, in Paris, and—what seemed to interest the New York audience more—a grand pianoforte, played in novel fashion by Dr. Karl Muck. During intermission the piano was quietly set in place of the conductor's stand, and there the chief musician seated himself on a level with his first string players, as he now performed and now directed, with bent head or with upraised finger, the Concerto Grosso in D minor, No. 10, from a series of twelve composed by Handel.

Dr. Muck restored more than the noble old music, akin to the famous "Largo," with quickened vigor in style; he brought back an air of intimate musical feeling missed in many local concerts of late. The applause as he appeared was renewed before he began to play, and the ovation afterward he chose to share by beckoning the orchestra to stand with him. A rising recall followed Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphony just before, as the performance of that master's expression of feelings, "serene," "jovial," "glad and thankful," in sun and storm, richly deserved.

"The Star-Spangled Banner" opened the evening, and after the concerto came an overture to Cherubini's "Anacreon," a classic not related to the "Anacreon in Heaven," that furnished America's patriotic air. Ravel's "Daphne and Chloe," new at these concerts, was a superb piece of sheer virtuosity by the whole band, not often to be excelled, its sweep of harmony and rhythm portraying a god Pan's invitation to the dance.

The New York Symphony Society opened a Carnegie Hall matinee yesterday with the "Harold in Italy" of Berlioz, a work as rare these days as Byron's poem, which suggested its panoramic tone-pictures of the mountains of the Abruzzi and the dwellers, pilgrims, brigands, therein. Mr. Lifschey played the viola obbligato of a lover's serenade. The matinee soloist was Claudia Muzio, soprano of the Metropolitan, who sang the "Casta Diva" from Bellini's "Norma" and "Depuis le Jour" from Charpentier's "Louise." It was an all-Ally list, French and Italian, except for Weber's "Freischuetz" overture, and one number from neutral Switzerland.

Ernest Bloch's "Trois Poemes Juifs" occupied a central point of interest in the New York orchestra program, these examples of the Swiss composer's works, among the most accessible of his music to American hearers, being performed for the first time at these concerts, as they were on May 3 of last year by Mr. Bodanzky before the Friends of Music, the composer himself having led a first American production the previous March 22 and 23 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston.

In closing my records for this year, I was gratified to find the splendid results obtained through The New York Times, so I think it no more than right to let you know and thank you at the same time.
I am inclosing a few inquiries received lately, showing that The Times is read quite a long ways from New York City. I have notified my agent to contract space for the year of 1918 in The Times for me, as I wish to use a great deal more advertising (as much again) this year than last.

MARK the famous makers who now equip every car with the Warner-Lenz.

Mark that practically every car maker, when he changes from old types, comes to the Warner-Lenz.

The trend is just beginning. The Warner-Lenz is new. State-wide laws forbidding glare are only lately in effect. This year will multiply the users of this ideal glareless light.

Exacting Tests

A motor car owner may make a mistake. He may be misled by sophistries. He may not make comparisons.

Not so with the motor car maker. His engineers make exacting tests. All lenses are usually compared. When famous makers adopt Warner-Lenz, their verdict fixes the logical lawful light. And motorists should accept it.

The Reasons

These are the reasons which engineers give for adopting the Warner-Lenz.

It is legal everywhere. That fact has been certified by countless authorities. And by every commission appointed under any state law.

Its light has no restrictions. There is no direct beam—no glare rays—to be limited in height.

IT gives a widespread, all-revealing light. Near and far, close and wide, it floods one's entire field of vision.

It lights the road and roadsides, the curves and turns, the upgrades and the downgrades. It lights them all like daylight.

The light is not affected by rise and fall of the car, nor by turning of the lens in the lamp-rim. That is vitally important.

The Warner-Lenz gives the ideal light. Drive for five minutes behind it and you never will drive without it. Compare it with other lawful lenses and you are bound to choose it.

The evidence lies in these engineers' verdict. Compare all types as they do and you will surely vote with them.

An Urgent Question

In 22 states there are state-wide laws forbidding glare lights now. Also in most cities. The old-time shaft-light is almost a universal outlaw.

In country driving dimmers will not do. They give too little light.

The right step is to change at once to the Warner-Lenz. Then your full light will be legal. You will also have a ten-fold better light.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIUMPH.

President Wilson has done what he set out to do. No appeal to "the opinions of mankind" upon matters of great moment ever called forth a more prompt and assenting response than has been given to his statement, addressed to Congress but also to the whole world, of the purpose for which war is being waged against Germany. No one who has read the countless newspaper columns which in the last few days have set forth the judgments of representative men of all classes of society in the allied countries upon the President's address can have failed to see that it has swept away doubt, hesitation, suspicion, and has united the peoples of the allied countries in the determination to sanction and support the prosecution of the war and to bear with fortitude its costs and sacrifices until a just and lasting peace has been made sure by the destruction of Germany's military power and lust of conquest. The address has been described as the greatest product of Mr. Wilson's mind and statesmanship, as the most remarkable State paper of the war. We may leave it to history to assign its deserved place and rank among the utterances of statesmen and the proclamations of Governments since the war began, but inasmuch as Mr. Wilson spoke with the intent to unite allied public opinion, and since he has so wonderfully accomplished that very thing, it would be hard to take exception to any form of eulogy, however enthusiastic, which the contemporary judgment of mankind may bestow upon the address and upon its author.

When Mr. Lloyd George addressed British labor last week, he, too, had a purpose in view. There was unrest among the trade unions of Great Britain; some of their leaders, like Mr. Henderson, who had consorted rather familiarly with the revolutionists now at the head of affairs in Russia, shared in some measure the Bolshevist distrust of the Government's purposes in the war, fearing that they were imperialistic, that, above all, they were capitalistic; even though this was a groundless suspicion, the zeal and the ardor of the workers might have been cooled. The Prime Minister was fortunate enough to allay these doubts and suspicions, but it was evident that Mr. Henderson was not altogether satisfied. Now British labor, in a formal manifesto by its Parliamentary and Executive Committees, welcomes President Wilson's "authoritative declaration of allied war aims" and declares that "within the last few days "the whole international situation has "become transformed, first by the "speech of the Prime Minister to the "Conference of Labor Delegates, and "secondly by the great pronouncement "of President Wilson," of which it lauds "the moral energy and the breadth of vision." Mr. Thomas, the representative of the French Socialists, speaks in a similar vein. Plainly, the President's address has been convincing in labor circles abroad where there was some evident ground for fear that appeal and argument might not be altogether successful. Among the statesmen and the men who speak for the allied Governments, and in the British and French press, there is no discordant note in the resounding chorus of praise for the President's statement. Lord Bryce declares that it "is admirable in spirit and contents."

Nowhere has the effect of the President's utterance been more gratifying to those who, from the beginning, have understood the war, who have never failed to see that a just and permanent peace could have its basis only in the overthrow of German militarism, than among that class abroad and in this country who for one reason or another, through the whole range of the critical spirit, from pain and regret and disapproval to actual disaffection, have stood somewhat aside, out of harmony with the prevailing loyal support of the prosecution of the war. In those quarters, the President's address has been marvelously effective. It is eagerly seized upon as a means of deliverance from the discomforts of solitude and aloofness, as a saving opportunity for a change of heart. This spirit has been manifested most astonishingly in an attempt to show that the President, in his address, and the Pope, in his peace letter last August, have had the same ends in view.

Fundamentally, there could be but one reason for the demands, so frequently heard, for restatements of war aims. When a customer inquires the price of goods, it is his purpose to secure a basis of information to enable him to decide whether he will buy or decline to buy. The demands for restatements of war aims could really have had no other purpose than that of enabling persons who were in doubt to determine whether they would support the war or oppose it. The extraordinary triumph of the President has been in no way more gratifyingly shown than by his successes in convincing those who doubted, in putting an end to hesitation and suspicions, and bringing to the wholehearted support of the war purposes he declares the entire body of public opinion here and in the countries of our allies. The resolve to make the foundations of the world's peace sure is one and irrevocable.

PASSED BY THE HOUSE.

The House of Representatives passed yesterday by exactly the necessary two-thirds vote of 274 to 136 the joint resolution for the submission of the woman suffrage amendment to the Legislatures of the several States. The feminist leaders, working on the fears and hopes of Representatives, their self-interest and that of their parties, have displayed a shrewdness and dexterity worthy of the most experienced managers and manipulators.

The amendment came up in happy time for them. The present House is almost equally divided. In the Congress elections next Fall no chance of losing a seat can be taken by either party. The Republicans determined not to miss this opportunity of making friends. They were determined not to alienate that mysterious quantity, "the suffrage vote." Their zeal for the amendment is beautiful. It wouldn't do for the Democrats to be behindhand. Why should the Devil have all the good tunes? Why should the wicked Republicans get all the advantage, if there is any advantage, in placating and charming "the suffrage vote"? The vote in the "suffrage States" is probably decided on the same grounds, often mixed and hard to analyze, as in non-suffrage States. Still, if there is any fact in the legend—and politicians are among the most credulous of men—the Democrats must be as ardent for suffrage as the Republicans. By such counsels was the Democratic strength divided, giving 104 votes to the amendment.

The opposition of many Southern Democrats rested on obvious conditions and reasonable apprehensions. But politics is politics. At least, in a year of Congress elections, Federal suffrage is not a great moral question. It is not a question of constitutional theories or State rights. It is purely political. It is a question of votes on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November. Keen-sighted Democrats saw the party's danger and opportunity. Objectors were pleaded with rather than reasoned with. Finally, and at the right moment, Mr. Wilson spoke. He gave up the position which he had repeatedly, and as The Times believes correctly, held, that suffrage is a State, not a Federal, matter. He sacrificed what seemed to be a reasoned conviction to political expediency; to save his party from defeat in the Congressional elections he disregarded its platform and his own belief that suffrage is a matter for State decision.

In the presence of war and world-problems, woman suffrage is but a piffling and subminor matter. The House has done what was expected of it, if by the smallest possible margin. In the Senate, with its longer tenure and smaller anxiety about "fences," the amendment is like to find harder sledding.

WAR DEPARTMENT ACTIVITIES.

Praise of the War Department was Secretary Baker's theme when he appeared before the Senate Military Committee yesterday. Although his figures of achievement were not new, they were as impressive as ever when marshaled by the Secretary. His intention seems to have been to spike the guns of criticism. The admissions made before the Committee by General Crozier, General Sharpe, and others are sufficient justification for what has been said in many quarters about the omissions and mistakes of the War Department. Well-informed and honest criticism it should always welcome, especially when the information comes from its own officers.

The record of performance in the expansion, equipment, training, and transportation of troops the American people are proud of, but it cannot be denied that the Senate inquiry has cleared the air and accelerated our preparations to take part in the fighting in France. If there had been no inquiry, some things would have continued to go wrong and reorganizations would have been delayed. The creation of the War Council, involving changes in the Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments, may not have been occasioned by testimony which the Senate Committee elicited, but at least the reform was hastened: the service benefited at once. In fact the War Department, which, to use the vernacular of the trotting track, had shown a tendency to "break," settled down to a smooth and swifter gait after the disclosures made in the committee room. Yet in Secretary Baker's brief the note is one of almost indiscriminate praise of the work of the Department. Sometimes he seems to be oblivious of shortcomings in camp equipment, as when he says that "no such provi-"sion has ever been made for the "comfort, health, and general well-"being of any army." The record does not bear him out. There is the adverse testimony of cantonment commanders. Comparisons with the awful blundering that made the conduct of the Spanish war a reproach to this country were not in order. We do things differently now. Still Surgeon General Gorgas found conditions not to his liking in the Southern camps of 1917.

Read alone, and not in the light of facts extracted by the Senate Military Affairs Committee, Mr. Baker's statement would justify an opinion that there had been no flaw in the performance of the War Department. What could be more gratifying than this assurance:

> Arms of the most modern and effective kind, including artillery, machine guns, automatic rifles, and small arms, have been provided by manufacture or purchase for every soldier in France, and are available for every soldier who can be gotten to France in the year 1918.

The last statement is in conflict with General Crozier's testimony about field and machine guns. Again, does Secretary Baker really mean what he says in this paragraph:

> A substantial army is already in France, where both men and officers have been additionally and specially trained and are ready for active service.

Does he mean by "active service" duty in the trenches; that General Pershing's force is well enough trained to take over a considerable part of the western front? Some of the troops that arrived last Summer are doubtless ready for the test, but the Secretary's statement seems to be too sweeping. The American people would be glad to believe that the army in France, which is really "substantial," was now well enough trained and seasoned to deal with a German offensive.

What Secretary Baker has to say about the purpose of the War Council is eminently satisfactory. Free "from the burdens of detail administration," it is to take "a large supervising view "of all questions of organization and "supply and give to the Government "the highest value of their [the mem-"bers'] talents and experience." In other words, they are to advise, not to transact; but the functions of the War Council are still rather nebulous. It is apparent from the Secretary's description of the reorganization of the Ordnance and Quartermaster's Departments that he is not in sympathy with Senator Chamberlain's bill to create a Department of Munitions. Nevertheless, the subject should be thrashed out by Congress in an endeavor to obtain the greatest efficiency and the utmost production.

THE BANKING SITUATION.

The returns of the national banks under the call of Nov. 20 reflect continuance of excellent conditions. Since September the resources have increased two billions, and within a year three billions. Total resources are a new maximum, at $18,553,000,000, for about one-half in number of the banking institutions of the country. Deposits have increased within a year by $2,309,000,000. It is odd to find the greatest increases of deposits in banks outside reserve cities in Texas, Oklahoma, and the country banks of New York, in that order. There can be no doubt that this is a farmers' year. Within the year loans increased $1,189,000,000. When deposits increase faster than loans there is an indication of safe and sane banking. The proportion of loans to deposits on Nov. 20 was 64.44 per cent., against 66.83 per cent. a year ago.

On the other hand, it is to be remarked that the banks as a whole could not make such a good showing if it were not for the help of the city banks. In this city, at the date of the call, the loans exceeded the deposits by a billion dollars. It was a reflection of the Liberty Loan flotations, of course. Although the condition was not welcome, it was not so out of balance as appears, because the deposits were practically stationary. In other words, the Government finance was practically in a class by itself. The condition was righted in the manner reported by the Federal Reserve's Bulletin for January. The excess of this business here was equalized through the Federal Reserve districts by rediscounts, thus, the Bulletin says, "proving the wisdom and utility of "one of the basic principles of the "Federal Reserve act." This was shown in another striking manner. In the words of the Federal Reserve Board:

> During the first half of December the Government redeemed large amounts of outstanding certificates of indebtedness issued in anticipation of payments due on Liberty Loan subscriptions and used as principal collateral for member bank notes. Between Nov. 30 and Dec. 21 the holdings by the Federal Reserve banks of notes protected by war loan securities decreased from $405,608,000 to $146,819,000, this reduction being due in a large measure to the redemption of the securities underlying the discounted paper.

We are indeed in a new banking era when old statistics and arguments are useless. The six billion Liberty bonds were the basis of as much currency as the banks chose to issue, which under our old banking system could have been retired in amounts limited to a total in a year less than the actual requirements of a fraction of a month. Contrast the easy expansion and contraction of our currency with the currency flotations of other countries, even in England. It is not too much to say that under old conditions it would have been impossible for the country to conduct the banking operations of the last six months, including the mobilization of two billions of credit in New York and its redistribution, so far as necessary, by central authority controlling adequate means.

No doubt the figures are dizzying, and call for sober consideration. The wheels are going around with prodigious speed, but there are no signs of hysteria among the engineers. The system is functioning so far within its reserve strength that confidence may be felt in its continuing to do so. There are those who consider that we are inflating our credits excessively. They are supported by figures of some kinds, but not by all the figures. How could we be expected to conduct expansion of trade with any less expansion of credits? Is there not proof that our expansion of credits is on a basis not only allowing but also requiring deflation when the conditions change? The true test between inflation and expansion is the relation between the increases of goods and exchanges and the increases of currency and credits. If there is a somewhat disproportionate increase in the latter factor, it is to be borne in mind that it is not on our own account. We are conducting the world's business and banking to a degree, for the time, greater than England ever did. We should have the courage of our strength, and not let ghosts of bygone limitations lessen our usefulness to our partners in world affairs, to our loss of an opportunity such as no nation ever before enjoyed.

THE KAISER TO THE POLES.

It is pleasant for students of the Kaiser to see him retain all that ingenuous modesty which has charmed them for nearly a generation. His speech to the delegates of the Polish Regency Council was rich in this characteristic virtue. He thanks the Poles, to whom Prussia must be historically dear, because, in common with Germany and Austria-Hungary, those two turtle doves of the European Arcadia, they "pursue the aims which guaran-"tee the weal of humanity and peace-"ful co-operation of peoples."

The thought of the peaceful co-operation of the Magyars and the Germans in Austria-Hungary to guarantee the weal of the Czechs, Slovaks, Rumanians, Slovenes, Italians, Serbo-Croats, makes the tear unbidden flow; and what pious eye can hold back the brine at recollection of the German guarantee of humanity in Posen and Alsace-Lorraine? The villagers of East Africa and Damaraland, the surviving Hereros of Southwest Africa, can testify to the Kaiser's labors for the weal of humanity and the peaceful co-operation of peoples. Belgium, Northern France, Serbia, Rumania, the German-occupied territories in Russia, Russian Poland itself, are witnesses of German humanity. Asia Minor and Syria are monuments to it. The depths of the sea declare it.

In view of the Prussian share in the partitions of Poland, of the German treatment of the Poles in Prussian Poland, the Kaiser's passionate devotion to Poland and humanity is touching. A Prussian Polish journal, the Lech of Gnesen, showed us, six or seven years ago, the Prussian Polish fondness of the guarantors of the weal of humanity. The Lech was wishing these pretty things to the Prussian Pole who consents to sell land to Germans:

> If the seller wishes to shake your hand, then turn away and spit on the ground as before the greatest of villains; if he wishes to enter your house, lock the door in his face. May he live in loneliness, like Cain! May the curse of the Polish people weigh upon him till death! May no one follow his coffin, no one pray for his soul!

Isn't it sad that the so lovable and humane Germans are so misunderstood by the peoples with whom they co-operate?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Exaggeration, Too, Is Lamentable. If Secretary Pickett of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition, and Public Morals had included in his "clip sheet" about the misbehavior of our troops abroad the full text of the Roosevelt letter to which he only referred, much less of disquietude would have been created by his accusations. For then it would have been obvious, even to those of us who are most ready to believe alarming reports, that his tale of drunkenness and debauchery among the soldiers had next to no backing at all from Colonel Roosevelt, and that it drew highly exaggerated conclusions from facts which, while regrettable in themselves, constituted little if anything more than the irreducible minimum of evil that will be found among men until the millennium comes.

And that, probably, will not be "for the period of the war."

One of the Colonel's sons seems to have been shocked—as well he might be—by the sight of some American soldiers in a state of intoxication. The spectacle is, indeed, a grievous one, and the men who present it, whether officers or privates, too clearly demonstrate that they do not realize the weight of the responsibilities they bear. They are even guilty of an approach to treason, in that, by disgracing themselves and reducing their own efficiency, they are giving aid and comfort to the enemy. But it was presumably considerations like these, correct yet extreme, that made young Roosevelt say that he had become a prohibitionist for life.

That he has done so is well, perhaps, or at any rate it will do no harm to him or anybody else to be a total abstainer from alcohol. But it was by no means the same thing as saying that the American Army abroad is, or is likely to be, a collection of vicious drunkards. From the chaplains who are with the troops comes testimony which can be called that of professional experts, and it is to the effect that the moral condition of the force is satisfactory. By implication they admit that it might be better, but of course that is so. The men are—men, and therefore imperfect.

Their Aid Should Be Useful. According to official information, given out by one of the Attorney General's assistants, of the Germans, numbering "hundreds," who have been interned in this country since we entered the war, only six have been paroled permanently and only ten freed for a limited time.

These are interesting facts, but they should not have been offered in the tone of him who has a grievance, as the public dissatisfaction caused by these releases, while they were unexplained and while their comparatively small number remained unknown, was entirely justified, and so was the criticism naturally resulting from the reticence maintained, hitherto, in regard to a matter of legitimate concern to all patriotic citizens.

Even more interesting, however, than the fact that six of the interned Germans proved to the Department of Justice that their sequestration was unnecessary—their liberation can be taken as showing that—is the further revelation that, in ten cases, enemy aliens have been released on limited parole in order that "they might obtain valuable information to aid Government agents in ferreting out plots and propaganda against the United States." In other words, these particular suspects are themselves now acting as Government agents, and, in the eyes of the plotters and propagandists whom they are helping to put in confinement, they are become spies and informers.

It is to be hoped that they may be highly successful in this important capacity. But it is such a—well, such a humble capacity, and one so little likely to earn popularity, even among loyal German-Americans and innocent Germans in America, that one wonders whether the men on temporary parole—whose names have all been printed—will long share the common joy produced by the Assistant Attorney General's disclosures. To them those disclosures are likely to be just a little embarrassing.

Labor Is Scarce Already. Secretary Wilson does not share the apprehensions so frequently expressed of late by the leading men in many of our industries as to the coming of a serious shortage of labor, due to the number of men who have volunteered or been drafted for military service. The situation here, he declares, is in this respect nothing like as serious as is that of England, for there about 25 per cent. of the 20,000,000 who were engaged in gainful occupations have been called to the colors, and that is more than can be easily or even safely spared, since it gravely reduces the productive powers on which, in these days, the effective maintenance of an army is dependent.

We, the Secretary says, have at least 25,000,000 workers, and for the present there is no thought of taking more than 1,500,000 of them for war—a number less than that of the unemployed in normal years.

This computation would be more reassuring if it did not ignore, or seem to ignore, the fact that besides the men performing military service in the strict and literal meaning of that term, a much greater army is and will be required for work which, though it does not come in the same category, yet is very close to it and is equally withdrawn from the fields of ordinary production.

As a matter of indubitable fact, a shortage of labor is already felt in the United States, and it is not alone the farmers who are anxiouly wondering how they are going to get their work done unless the principle of conscription is extended to cover distinctly civilian activities.

ART NOTES.

Paintings by Caro-Delvaille, and a Collection of Medallions.

The inaugural exhibition at the new Gimpel & Wildenstein Galleries consists of paintings by Henry Caro-Delvaille and medals and relief portraits by T. Spicer-Simson, both collections to remain on view until Feb. 1.

Mr. Caro-Delvaille needs little introduction to the American public, who know him both as a painter and as a writer. Too little has been seen of his work, however, to insure the wide recognition of his talent so richly deserved. The present exhibition shows him as a portrait painter, with the brilliant and essentially Gallic portrait of his wife and daughter accenting the racial side of his highly personal product, and as a mural decorator with two series of panels, one intended for the hall of a country house, the other for a library or reception room. The first series is classic in feeling, young figures among architectural and out-of-door surroundings, treated very simply in the manner of bas-relief. The second series is Oriental in subject, Chinese sages in a landscape of rock and mountain, noble in composition and free from any suggestion of pseudo-orientalism in treatment.

There are other decorative panels in the exhibition and several examples of the artist's masterly drawing of the nude; also one or two still life subjects. It is on the whole the most important exhibition of modern painting to be seen in New York at present.

The medallions by T. Spicer-Simson are of special interest to collectors and connoisseurs who know his work as it is represented in European museums. His modeling is both firm and flexible, and he has the rare quality of giving to a portrait in little the same degree of character and interest to be expected in one on a large scale. The portrait of the Scandinavian dancer, Miss Katherine Gabaudin, is an example of his command of swift sensitive line and expressive modeling. Mrs. Archer M. Huntington, Miss Margaret Anglin, Mr. Carnegie, Mrs. Edward Robinson, and ex-President Taft are among his many prominent sitters, and among the public medals designed by him are the Public Welfare Medal, the Entente Cordiale Medal for Great Britain and France in 1905, the medal commemorative of America's entry into the great war, and the memorial medal to the fallen heroes of the war.

A Lecture on Camouflage.

At a public meeting of the Municipal Art Society in the galleries of the National Arts Club Wednesday, Jan. 16, at 8:30 P. M., the subject of "Camouflage and Protective Coloration" will be presented by artists engaged in that work, the principal speaker of the evening being Mr. Peixotto, who is one of the best-equipped men in the country to speak on the subject.

THE "WILSON DOCTRINE."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To my mind the address of President Wilson to the Congress on Tuesday is not only the most important document called forth by the war, but it is one of the half dozen greatest and noblest documents in American history.

In certain of its details it imparts new and greater aims to America. The President's stand in regard to Alsace-Lorraine alone would make his address momentous; but his plan for the break up of Turkey, the re-establishment of the independence of the Balkan States, implies a greater change in the relations of European nations than would have been possible to conceive before the war. The achievement of the President's policy in regard to Southeastern Europe and Asiatic Turkey, backed, as it is, by the peoples of the United States, England, France, and Italy, will absolutely destroy Germany's great Middle-Europe scheme, which was to have been the sure basis and primary condition of her plan for dominating first Europe and then the world. President Wilson has made one of the most momentous and far-reaching decisions in history.

He expresses the basic purpose of the great democracies of the world, to free the Armenians, Jews, and Greeks from the malignantly cruel and horrible policies of the Turkish Government. Further, the plan to free these people will also destroy the basis of German world power.

Finally, there is one sentence that has been overlooked that contains a principle and the germ of a doctrine that may well become as basic and influential as the Monroe Doctrine. This is the sentence: "The day of conquest and aggrandizement is gone by."

In 1823 President Monroe made a similar statement in regard to the continents of North and South America.

President Wilson, expressing the fixed determination of the most powerful and wealthiest nation in the world, backed by the peoples of the British Empire, France, Italy, Russia, and Japan, has created a Wilson doctrine that forms the unchangeable war aims of America and her allies.

The President's voice is the voice of America. He speaks with the authority of a hundred million Americans. There are those who have continually demanded a "restatement of the war aims of the Entente." They are answered, once for all, by a document worthy to rank with the great charters of human freedom.

Case Against the Barnard Statue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your readers should be grateful to The Times for publishing Howard Russell Butler's ringing letter about the Lincoln statue. Mr. Butler is a hustler, and if he will take the lead in starting a popular subscription we can send a copy of the Saint-Gaudens statue to London.

It seems to me that the chief reason for discarding the Barnard statue has not been sufficiently emphasized. It is that it is not an adequate portrait. Lincoln's neck was not like that of a turtle, and he had hands, not paws; and his figure, even if tall and ungainly, was not like that of Barnard's statue.

Among the two best examples of the genius of Saint-Gaudens are the statues of two seafaring men—the Farragut statue in Madison Square and the statue of Captain Randall at the Sailors' Snug Harbor. The former is a portrait, and as such was approved by Loyall Farragut, the Admiral's son, and by many others. The latter is not a portrait, for the reason that the sculptor had no portrait or description of Captain Randall, who had been dead for many years. It is necessarily an ideal conception, and as such is an admirable and satisfying work of art. But would Saint-Gaudens have been justified in setting up the Randall statue as a representation of Farragut on the ground that it was his conception of a sailor of the highest type? The question needs no answer. For the same reason it is unnecessary to determine whether the Barnard statue is a noble conception or not, or even whether it has high artistic merit or not. The Barnard statue should be rejected, and may be rejected solely on the ground that we have irrefutable evidence in photographs taken from life and in the testimony of many who knew the man that Barnard's statue—at least below the head—does not depict Abraham Lincoln as he was.

Confusion of Dutch and German.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From my experience I am convinced that there exists a widespread misunderstanding in the minds of a good many on this side of the ocean regarding the natives of the Netherlands (the so-called Dutch) as to their status as a wholly independent nation. The writer has often been interrogated on this subject by otherwise well-informed people.

It really ought to be stated for the benefit of these unknowing or unthinking ones that the Netherlands live and exist absolutely independent of any nation in Europe, Germany included. It ought to be understood that it is a gross error to regard, as many in the United States seem to do, the Netherlands as a part of Germany or in some way under German domination.

That the Netherlands has its present status in Europe and expects to retain it is for the greater part due to its most able government and high-minded statesmen, a fact not only well recognized in Europe, but not the least in Washington.

Amalekites and Amorites at Albany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It grieves me to see The Times identify Elon Brown and William Barnes with the Amalekites and the Amorites. In the twenty-sixth chapter of Genesis, Verse 34, it is related that "Esau was forty years old when he took to wife the daughter of Elon, the Hittite," and as for the other—well, the Amalekites and Amorites fought at Taanach, by the waters of the Megiddo, and certainly Mr. Barnes was not at Armageddon.

A PLEA FOR MORE EARNESTNESS IN TIME OF WAR.

O Dweller in each human soul,
  Waken our better selves to know
That each, in service of the whole,
  Must luxury forego!

Check Thou the glutton in his greed,
  Who still goes on to eat and eat,
Consuming food that others need,
  Although he is replete!

Make us go simply clad, and wear
  A quiet garb without display;
And from our minds the fret and care
  Of fashion sweep away.

Quench in our hearts the poor desire
  To walk by others' sight alone;
They who to noble things aspire
  Have vision of their own.

Discountenance the petty ways
  That still distract the nation's trend—
The false amusements, trivial plays,
  Of which there is no end.

Oh, make us sober in Thy black
  And bitter judgment of the earth!
Give reason unto wits that lack,
  And check our callous mirth!

MAY OPPOSE KRACKE.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 10.—With the nomination of F. J. H. Kracke of Kings County as member of the Public Service Commission for the First District officially before the Senate, the first opportunity for a show of strength between Governor Whitman and his Republican opponents in the upper house has arrived. Commissioner Kracke was manager of Governor Whitman's primary and general campaign, and his appointment is regarded at the Capitol as solely a reward for services rendered to the Governor.

Mr. Kracke is already a member of the Public Service Commission under a recess appointment made by Governor Whitman the day before the legislative session began. Under the law he must be confirmed before Jan. 22, or his salary as well as the validity of his official acts after that date in the absence of favorable action by the Senate, would be in jeopardy, although he could remain in his position as a "holdover."

The nomination of Mr. Kracke and that of Charles Bulkley Hubbell of New York for places on the commission were sent to the Senate Finance Committee when received at last night's session. Mr. Hubbell was named at the same time that Mr. Kracke received his appointment. So far no opposition has developed to confirmation of his nomination.

In view of the appointment of Kracke, the "strengthening" of the Senate Finance Committee by the addition of three Republicans who have not stood with the Governor in the past is not without significance. These new appointees are Senator Ottinger of New York, and C. Lockwood and L. Lawson of Kings. They were arrayed against Commissioner Kracke in the recent Mayoralty fight in New York City. Senator Lawson was candidate for the nomination of Borough President on the Bennett ticket.

Neither Ottinger nor the Senators from Kings were prepared today to state whether they would vote for a favorable report on the nomination of Kracke, and this caused some to think that his confirmation would be fought.

A report came today from an authoritative source, however, that neither the Senate leader, Brown, nor Senator Sage of Albany, Chairman of the Finance Committee, also anti-Whitman, would put any obstacles in the way of Kracke's confirmation. It was stated that these leaders, realizing that the coming effort to repeal the direct primary law would involve a bitter fight, were anxious to avoid anything that might be thought a purely personal or political fight on the Governor at present, so that they might be able when the struggle over direct primaries came to convince the public that it was a fight for principle, with no personal element in it.

Friends of Governor Whitman insist that if there should be no fight over the confirmation of Kracke this may be accepted as proof that the opposition lacks the strength to win.

Incidentally there are reports that Governor Whitman is contemplating a coup that will bring to his side the support of the Barnes organization here, and that if Barnes does not assent the Governor will be in a position to take his organization away from him. Negotiations have been in progress with a view of getting for a protégé of the Albany leader an appointment on the up-State Public Service Commission.

The Senate and Assembly held brief sessions today and then adjourned until Tuesday. In the Senate, Senator Wagner introduced a Corrupt Practices bill, providing for a report of campaign contributions ten to five days prior to primary and general elections and limiting individual contributions to $10,000. Political committees would be prohibited from contracting debts for campaign purposes, receiving any contributions in the ten last days of the campaign or disbursing any money to hire special workers on Election Day.

Senator Wagner moved that his bill be advanced immediately to third reading, an unusual step at this time of the session. He said the measure was designed to prevent a recurrence of the disgraceful conditions that marred the Mayoralty campaign in New York City.

Senator Henry M. Sage of Albany objected to this course and the bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

BILLION A YEAR ARMY'S PAY.

Total Does Not Include Family Allowances or Disability Allotments.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The total pay of the United States Army in December was approximately $78,580,800, the Committee on Public Information announced today in the second of its series of statements on the pay of the army and navy and the operation of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. This is at the rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 a year.

The total does not include family allowances or compensation for disability of soldiers provided for in the Insurance act and paid through the War Risk Bureau.

"The intricate task of paying the officers and men of the army, made more difficult by the wide expansion of the last six months, is being satisfactorily accomplished," said the committee's statement.

"To prevent failure to meet the monthly compensation of every man in the service, no matter where he may be located, liberal sums are furnished the various Disbursing Quartermasters in order promptly to meet the army payrolls with their extraordinary demands for funds."

Men serving in France receive their pay in French currency or by United States checks as they may elect, and all soldiers are paid at the end of each month, or as soon thereafter as possible.

DENIES FARE INCREASE.

Service Board Finds City Franchise Bars Trolley Company.

The application of the North Shore Traction Company for permission to increase its rate of fare from 5 to 7 cents was denied yesterday by the Public Service Commission. The commission, however, made no formal order in the case, but held the matter open for ten days in order to permit the company to apply to the Board of Estimate for a modification of the franchise. Otherwise an order will be entered, denying the application of the company to increase its rate of fare.

Unlike the other companies which applied to the commission for permission to increase their income by charging 2 cents for transfers, this company wanted permission to make a direct advance to all passengers. It is the first case to be decided. The company operates a trolley line system in Nassau and Queens Counties.

The decision of the commission was written by Commissioner Whitney, who found that the company was entitled to an increase in fare because its income was not sufficient to meet the cost of operation, and afford a reasonable return on the investment. The commission, however, announced that it was without power to authorize an increase "for the reason that the so-called local franchise obtained from the city contains a provision that not more than 5 cents shall be charged for a single fare."

AID JEWISH CHARITY DRIVE.

Young Men's Committee to Start Democratic Movement.

Plans for the campaign next week by the Young Men's Committee of the Federation in Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies were discussed last night in a meeting at the home of Adolph Lewisohn. Samuel Lewisohn presided. An address outlining the plan was made by Dr. I. Edwin Goldwasser, who said that the campaign was designed primarily to make the Federation a thoroughly democratic organization.

Only about 25 out of the 100 members of the committee were present last night, the other 75 having volunteered for service in the army or navy.

URGE GOVERNMENT TO HOUSE WORKERS

PLAN A SUCCESS IN ENGLAND

Propose a Commission to Take the Land and to Construct Communities.

In a list of recommendations sent to President Wilson and members of the War Council yesterday the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects urged that the Government take upon itself the responsibility for providing housing facilities for workmen employed in munition plants and shipyards. The recommendations were embodied in a resolution passed by the chapter, which pointed out that the high labor turnover in munitions and shipbuilding plants was due to inadequate housing facilities.

The resolution further declared that "the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Architects feels that a general policy which throws the ultimate financial burden of these war-time industrial housing operations upon private corporations or municipalities is inefficient because it believes that such a policy would long delay the taking of land and the building of the needed accommodations."

The following is a list of the specific suggestions sent to the President:

THE FIRST STEP.

Create a central authority with:
(a) Power to take land for this purpose.
(b) Powers to survey needs for housing facilities and to determine, in co-operation with a central piority board, the relative importance of industrial operations.
(c) Powers to design and construct communities where the needs of such have been made evident by the survey.
(d) Powers to operate and manage these communities during the war and for a period of years thereafter.
(e) Powers to maintain a high standard of physical well-being in munition plants, (adopting the standards set by our most progressive industrial corporations,) and to organize community activities within the communities thus created.

THE SECOND STEP.

Create a commission to study the final disposition of these properties. Such a commission to consider and report upon:
(a) The basis upon which such communities could be transferred to municipalities or local limited dividend corporations.
(b) The organization of local limited dividend corporations to manage and develop the communities created during the war.
(c) The establishment of that part of the cost which should be written off as belonging to the cost of war.
(d) The methods of saving of the appreciation of land values for the benefit of the community as a whole.

In discussing the recommendations, Frederick L. Ackerman, a member of the institute who has just returned from England, where he spent several months investigating the manner in which England was meeting her housing problem, declared that the only method whereby results could be obtained would be by the Government taking hold itself.

"In England," said Mr. Ackerman, "the experiment was first tried of leaving the housing question to industrial corporations and to municipalities. This resulted in endless bargaining and in many cases to absolute failure, because of the precariousness of the investment in the matter of constructing housing facilities near by a munition or shipbuilding plant. The Government stepped in and has saved the situation by taking over the matter.

"When an industrial corporation shows 'labor turnover' well above a thousand per cent., one does not have to argue regarding the needs of drastic action to remedy such a condition. I have it upon good authority that in one plant employing 17,000 men it is necessary to hire 8,000 men per week to maintain a full force.

"I need not go into detail regarding the suggested program. It strikes directly toward doing away with all of the bargaining, bickering, and treating over the purchase of land and the financial arrangements between corporations and the Government. The present system of throwing the responsibility to industrial corporations means endless delays in formulating the terms of agreement. By brushing these all aside and by setting up a commission to study the final disposition of these properties, delays would be avoided, and if at the close of the war it was found that they were good investments the terms of transfer could very easily be made. Unless the Government takes the initiative and the entire responsibility we will continue to bargain about these matters, and our munitions and ships will not be fabricated."

FREE SPEECH IN COLLEGES.

Dr. Lowell of Harvard Outlines Responsibilities It Puts on Faculty.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 10.—Academic freedom of speech is discussed by President Lowell of Harvard University in his annual report, which is published today. After recalling the many forms of national service which the university and its teaching force have rendered during the last year and reiterating that the college will continue "to devote itself to the ordinary process of education" during the coming year, he dwells at length upon academic freedom of speech.

"The teaching by the professor in his classroom on the subject within the scope of his chair ought to be absolutely free," he says. "He must teach the truth as he has found it and sees it. That is the primary condition of academic freedom, and any violation of it endangers intellectual progress. In order to make it secure, it is essential that the teaching in the classroom should be confidential. This does not mean that it is secret, but that what is said there should not be published."

Regarding the rights of the professor outside of his classroom but when dealing with his own particular subject, he says:

"Every professor must, therefore, be wholly unrestrained in publishing the results of his study in the field of his professorship. It is needless to add that for his study in the field of his profession, for the maintenance of its privileges, as well as for his own reputation among his fellows, whatever he writes or says on his own subject should be uttered as a scholar, in a scholarly tone and form. This is a matter of decorum, not of discipline; to be remedied by a suggestion, not by a penalty."

Much more serious difficulty, however, arises from the other half of the subject, namely the right of the professor "to express his views without restraint on matters lying outside the sphere of his professorship." The report continues: "This is not a question of academic freedom in its true sense, but of the personal liberty of the citizen. It has nothing to do with liberty of research and instruction in the subject for which the professor occupies the chair that makes him a member of the university. The fact that a man fills a chair of astronomy, for example, confers on him no special knowledge of, and no peculiar right to speak upon the protective tariff. His right to speak about a subject on which he is not an authority is simply the right of any other man, and the question is simply whether the university or college by employing him as a professor acquires the right to restrict his freedom as a citizen. It seems to me that this question can be answered only by again considering his position in his classroom and outside of it.

"The university or college is under certain obligations to its students. It compels them to attend courses of instruction, and on their side they have a right not to be compelled to listen to remarks offensive or injurious to them on subjects of which the instructor is not a master—a right which the teacher is bound to respect."

RED CROSS HAS SPENT $30,000,000 FOR WAR

Davison Says This Is Part of the $75,000,000 Appropriated by the Organization.

HAS 22,000,000 MEMBERS

War Fund Subscriptions Total $97,226,456—148 Corporations Gave Up Dividends.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Henry P. Davison, as Chairman of the Red Cross War Council, which was appointed on May 10 last by President Wilson, issued a statement tonight in which a detailed accounting is given of what has been achieved by that body during the last eight months. Chairman Davison's statement sets forth the latest available figures concerning the work of the Red Cross, and covers especially the state of the organization's finances.

After showing that the Red Cross since May 10 has increased from 486,394 to fully 22,000,000 members; that its chapters and auxiliaries have grown from 555 to 15,000 in the same period, and pointing out that the organization is operating through commissions in France, England, Italy, Serbia, Russia, and Rumania, Chairman Davison makes this statement regarding finances:

"The annual income of the Red Cross for the year ended May 10, 1917, was approximately $2,000,000.

"The total amount pledged in the campaign for the Red Cross War Fund June 17 to June 24 amounted to $103,000,000, exclusive of dividends declared by corporations. The total collected by the National Finance Committee acting through 2,993 Campaign Committees to Dec. 28, 1917, was $93,925,256.05. In addition there has been collected direct at National Headquarters either in special or direct contributions $3,319,352.12, making a total amount collected, (less certain refunds,) $97,226,456.31. Included in this amount collected, however, is the known amount that was received from dividends."

The number of corporations that declared so-called Red Cross dividends aggregating $17,948,969.81 was 148. Of the total sum collected $2,256,833.29 was received by the Campaign Committee in New York, included in the above figures. Interest on deposits and income on securities contributed makes the total received by the War Campaign Committee to Dec. 28, $97,525,955.64.

"It is estimated conservatively," adds Mr. Davison, "that at least another $6,000,000 will be collected for this fund. Of the amount pledged in New York, amounting to $21,926,990 (exclusive of dividends) of the matured pledges, all but $135,000 has been collected. Adding to the $97,525,000 above referred to, the $6,000,000 to be collected, makes the total gross amount which will be received by the Finance Committee $103,525,955.64.

"This does not accurately state the gross amount collected for the war fund because certain chapters which have not yet made final reports, have retained, on account of their 25 per cent., a sum which amounts to $3,000,000. Thus the gross amount of the war fund may be stated to be, including interest to date, $106,525,000. From this $106,500,000 the following deductions should be made to find out what has been available for expenditure by the War Council:

"There must first be deducted the $13,613,153.04 paid to chapters to be used by them in local war relief work under the 25 per cent. agreement. Then there must be added the $3,000,000 retained by chapters above referred to and an estimated sum of $1,300,000 to be paid to the chapters from the sums still outstanding. In round figures this is a deduction of $18,000,000 from $106,500,000 and leaves available for expenditure out of the war fund alone the sum of $88,525,955.64, exclusive of interest accruing after this date.

"There has been paid by William G. McAdoo, Treasurer of the Red Cross War Fund, to the Treasurer of the Red Cross in general or restricted funds $37,988,306.73, and on Dec. 28 there was a balance in Mr. McAdoo's hands of $45,948,259.32, which was deposited in 3,748 banks throughout America.

"The total amount actually expended to date by the War Council is approximately $30,000,000. This, however, does not tell the story of the total amount for which the American Red Cross stands committed.

"The total amount of appropriations which the War Council has made and which have been approved by the Executive Committee to Dec. 28 from the Red Cross War Funds aggregated $75,329,764.35. Included in this amount, however, are several appropriations which require explanation, and which really should be deducted from the total amount to ascertain the present financial condition.

"The total amount appropriated for Red Cross work in France was $37,445,618.72, but included in this amount is $6,922,000 approximately, appropriated for the purchase of supplies in this country to be shipped to and placed in the warehouses of the commission in France. In the appropriations which the War Council has made upon the recommendations of Major Murphy and his Financial Committee are included these sums, so that this amount, or a very considerable portion of it, will be available for further appropriations.

"There is also included $3,000,000 for working cash capital for the commission to France, which will only be spent for specific appropriations authorized by the War Council and is, therefore, likewise deductible from the total amount appropriated. There is also included in the above list of appropriations $730,000 for working capital for the fourteen divisional officers.

"There is one other appropriation included in the list of appropriations which requires comment and that is an appropriation of $11,288,417 for the purchase of supplies for resale to chapters, such as wool, yarn, and gauze. This amount is represented either by sums due from divisional offices, or by goods in warehouses, but as it is going to be necessary continually to have a stock of such merchandise on hand, this sum is not available for further appropriations. It is a working capital and it is believed that no further additions will have to be made to this working capital, but that it will be entirely sufficient for the period of the war.

"This leaves available to the War Council, assuming our estimate of collections to be correct, for further appropriation $23,800,000, and leaves in the Treasury today, and from collections reasonably expected to be made, approximately $50,000,000, a portion of which is, of course, incumbered by the appropriations already made."

BRICK CHURCH CELEBRATES

Pastor Describes It as Always Aggressive in Loyalty.

At a service held last night at the Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Thirty-seventh Street, to commemorate the hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the first Brick Church at Beekman Street and Park Row, Dr. Albert Ledoux told of the Loyalty of the Church to the Colonies in the Revolutionary War and the firm support it had given to Lincoln in the civil war. He said that in the present war the church was doing its full share in war relief work, and had given many of its members to the army and navy.

Dr. William Pierson Merrill, pastor of the Brick Church, spoke on the spirit of the Brick Church which he said had always represented Americanism in its ideals and convictions. Its loyalty, he said, had never been passive, but always vigorous and a help to the country. Robert Fulton Cutting delivered an address in which he congratulated the Brick Church on the principles for which it stood and good work which it had done since its foundation.

The Brick Presbyterian Church, which was originally part of the First Presbyterian Church on Wall Street, was at first situated at Beekman Street and Park Row, where the first service was held on Jan. 1, 1768. The church separated from the First Presbyterian Church in 1809 and moved to its present site in 1858.

MISS FASSETT TO WED ENSIGN NEVIN

Ex-Congressman's Daughter Engaged to Son of Late Composer, a Member of Naval Reserve.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Sloat Fassett of 895 Park Avenue, formerly of Elmira, N. Y., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jennie Fassett, to Ensign Ethelbert Paul Nevin, U. S. N. R., son of Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin of this city and the late Mr. Nevin, the composer.

Miss Fassett has traveled and studied abroad, and is a student of music and the languages. She attended the Cathedral School in Washington, D. C., at the same time as the sister of her fiance, Miss Doris Nevin, and it was through their friendship that she first met Mr. Nevin, who is now stationed on one of the United States transports.

Miss Fassett's father was for eight years a member of the New York Senate, and the Republican nominee for Governor of this State in 1891. He was a member of Congress from 1905 to 1911.

NOT FOR FULL FREE TRADE.

President's Plan Is Said to Include Revenue Raising Tariffs.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—From all that can be gathered here, it is understood that President Wilson did not contemplate the abolition of tariffs for revenue raising purposes when he included in his statement of American war aims a program for the "removal as far as possible of all economic barriers and the establishment of an equality of trade among all the nations consenting to peace and associating themselves for its maintenance."

As near as can be ascertained, it is contemplated that under this clause of the world's peace program the President would seek to make all nations "favored nations" with a view to eliminating the international jealousies and controversies that have sometimes arisen out of favored nation treatment for some and not for others. President Wilson believes his plan will go far toward excluding from world politics one of the foremost causes of international friction.

An official cablegram from Rome today says:

"The Italian press comments extensively upon Lloyd George's speech reiterating the Entente's war aims, to which the Central Powers will have to reply with equal frankness and precision. Lloyd George's declarations demonstrate that peace depends entirely upon a change in Austro-German mentality regarding the war program."

OYSTER BAY HOMES BURN.

Special to The New York Times.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Jan. 10.—Two Summer homes were destroyed by fire here today, the loss aggregating about $100,000. Early this morning fire started in the house of Charles R. Samuel M. Schafer, senior member of the Stock Exchange firm of Schafer Bros., and Treasurer of Temple Emanu-El, died yesterday at his home, 52 West Forty-sixth Street, where he had lived for fifty years. Mr. Schafer was one of the original members of the "Coal Holers" so called because they traded many years ago in a basement at 23 William Street. Mr. Schafer was born in this city Sept. 12, 1840. He attended the public schools and entered a brokerage house as a young man. In the years immediately following the civil war he became prominent as a gold broker. At the time of his death he was Vice President and a Director of the German-American Bank. He had been re-elected to both these offices at the annual meeting on Wednesday. Mr. Schafer is survived by his wife, three sons and four daughters.

THE Sanford MOTOR TRUCK

SANFORD WORM DRIVE TRUCKS

2½ Ton—3½ Ton—5 Ton
for Immediate Delivery

THE more thorough your knowledge of mechanical perfection in trucks, the more readily will you instantly appreciate the superiority of the Sanford Worm Drive Truck.

Take it unit for unit. A glance will show you that each part stands out for its super-strength—that each unit is perfection in its class.

And in the improvements made in the placing arrangements of certain of these units we have attained perfect balance.

As an out and out service proposition the Sanford offers to the prospective motor truck purchaser more evidence of dependability, more dollar for dollar value than fully two-thirds of the motor trucks now on market.

Men, methods and materials, these form the foundation upon which Sanford success is being built—the big underlying reason why during the coming year more Sanford motor trucks will be produced and sold than in any two years before.

Value, plus performance—that's the combination that makes the SANFORD a truck you would be proud to own—a truck that is backed by the engineering and transportation men who have made a study of these problems for years.

To own a Sanford is to realize to the fullest the greatest economies of time, labor and money that the motor truck has wrought for modern business.

Let us tell you more about the Sanford.

The Woman Voter

Village Gossip in the Halls of Congress With Its Rumors and Scandals, and How They are Dealt With—The Tricks of the Old-fashioned Lobbyist.

TENTH ARTICLE.—SHE GETS SOME LIGHT ON THE DARK SIDE OF GOVERNMENT.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

"You don't mean that there isn't any corruption in Congress?" the College Woman inquired.

"I didn't say so, did I?" returned the ex-Congressman.

"No, but in the sketch you've just given of a Congressman's life you pointed out that there was no corruption in any of the things you described."

"I didn't mean to imply that a Congressman couldn't be corrupt," said the ex-Congressman. "Congress, as I said, is made up entirely of human beings, and I don't suppose you could get any large number of human beings together without taking the chance of there being a crook somewhere among them. But Congress is very much above the average in that respect. A scandal there is very rare."

"Isn't that because the scandals are not discovered?" asked Tom.

"Just the reverse. Scandals are sometimes discovered and, when they are investigated, turn out not to be scandals at all. So far from scandals being suppressed, I should say that there are more rumors of crookedness than there ever was crookedness. You see, Congress is just like a village. It has a life of its own, apart from the life back home and the social life of Washington both.

"You at home here think of a Congressmen just as a Congressman, and put them all about on a level, imagining that each sees the work of Congress before him as a whole and is on the inside of it. The truth is that the work of Congress is like that of a great factory, highly specialized in each department. A new Congressman finds the whole thing a mystery, and even an old one doesn't know much about the things that are going on outside his own line of work, any more than in a factory the man working in the repair shop or the forges knows what is going on in the auditing department.

"Furthermore, Congressmen often don't know each other. For many years David A. De Armond of Missouri was one of the three or four leading Democrats in the House and Joseph G. Cannon was one of the three or four leading Republicans. Both of them were constantly taking part in the debates, and, in fact, each often acted as leader and manager of his party in this or that debate. They sometimes actually confronted each other from the Republican and Democratic sides of the House and clashed in sharp passages at arms.

"Finally Cannon was elected Speaker, the Republicans then being in the majority in the House. At the same time the Democratic members elected a leader, who was John Sharp Williams. He designated De Armond as his assistant leader, who in his absence was to be the official head of the House Democrats. He was mapping out his policies with his new assistant, when De Armond said:

"'In case of any negotiations with the Speaker while you're away, it might be as well if I knew him. Will you introduce me?'

"'What!' said Williams. 'Do you mean to say that you've been sixteen years in Congress and don't know Uncle Joe?'

"'It's a fact,' said De Armond. 'I never met him in my life.'

"So Williams introduced him. Of course, it was exceptional for two such prominent and active leaders as Cannon and De Armond to be strangers, but among ordinary members there is nothing unusual about it. Most of the work of Congress is done outside the House itself; it is done in the committee rooms, and what you see when you watch the House in action is merely the finishing touches to work already nearly completed. So that a man who works hard has plenty to do that never brings him in contact with most of his fellow-members, and he may not even know some of them by sight.

"When you look down on the House from the gallery, it seems to your eye as if all the members were not only in plain sight of you but in plain sight of one another. If you were to sit down among them you would be surprised to find how narrow your range of vision was. Outside of the group around you the House seems merely a mass and a noise. When adjournment comes, or when you leave for any other reason, you make your way out as you would in a theatre, and you no more see the individuals than you see the individuals who are leaving the theatre with you. If a man sticks at his place all day he never sees more than the group around him from the time he comes in till the time he leaves, and when he leaves the only people he sees are those who are leaving by the same aisle out of which he is going.

"Now in such a life as this, really the life of a small town, human nature being what it is, there is the same tendency to gossip about one's neighbors and the same ignorance of the neighbors' real motives that there is in a small town. We all love scandal. Some Congressman hears a choice bit of it about some other Congressman, or some Cabinet officer, perhaps, and retails it to his chum in the cloakroom. For Congressmen are only human beings; they are just as credulous as other human beings, and what is more, they are often just as ignorant of everything in Congress, outside of their own narrow sphere of individual activity, as you are here in New York.

"After awhile the gossip gets out and there is a scandal. People are ready to believe the worst of politicians, and the mere assertion that there is something wrong in the Committee on Hymns and Doxologies is enough to damn every member of that committee in the popular mind as a crook. The members of the committee heatedly demand an investigation; the public looks on callously, and says, 'Aha! trying to cover up their tracks.' Then there is a long investigation, full of tiresome details which nobody reads. After awhile the investigating committee reports that there is nothing in the scandal, and the public says, 'Whitewash.'

"That was the history of the so-called 'leak' scandal, in which some member of the Administration was supposed to have tipped off friends in Wall Street about the Administration's foreign policy in order to enable them to make a fortune. The corridors of Congress were full of that gossip, and if you had heard it you would have been surprised to notice that the Congressmen who retailed it with winks and innuendoes retailed it just as a man in the subway retails some scandalous gossip. That is, they 'got it from somebody on the inside' or 'from a friend of mine who knows.' You'd suppose the Congressman himself was on the inside and knew, wouldn't you? That's because you imagine Congress to be a totally different thing from what it really is. It's no more on the inside than you are, except as to the particular things the particular Congressman is engaged in."

"Still, you don't mean to say that that is the invariable history of every scandal, do you?" asked Tom. "Isn't there anything in all the ancient stories about lobbyists?"

"Wait a moment," interrupted his wife. "What is a lobbyist?"

"A lobbyist," said the ex-Congressman, "is a man who influences Congressmen to vote for or against some piece of legislation. He was so called because he was supposed to stand out in the lobby and buttonhole the Congressman as he came out; and there was always an underlying idea that while he was buttonholing the Congressman in the lobby he slipped him some greenbacks.

"That sort of thing dates back to an era that is gone, but the word remains. Mind you, I don't mean to say that bribery and corruption are gone, or that they ever will go until all men are honest. As long as there are two dishonest men, or women either, left in the world, one will bribe the other to give him what he wants. But ~~to~~ suppose that Congress, even in its worst days, was any worse in that respect than other bodies of men is to suppose that the voters managed somehow with unerring perception, and for no earthly reason, to pick out all the crooks in the country and enthusiastically elect them to Congress.

"Just after the War of Secession there was a great boom in material prosperity in this country, and men were so busy getting rich that for awhile moral values were altogether lost sight of. Of course, Congress was affected just as all other departments of life were affected, and it reeked with corruption but it was not a particle worse than business was, for instance. If Congress had its Credit Mobilier scandal, business had its Black Friday and its Gold Conspiracy, and industry had its railroad wreckers.

"If you wish to know the worst of that time, read Mark Twain's 'Gilded Age,' which painted it in its blackest colors. But black as he paints Congress, he does not paint it as a wicked band of pirates elected by a high-souled and saintly constituency. He shows how men robbed one another in business by wildcat schemes; he shows how the whole age was rotten under its gilt of prosperity.

"It was in those days that the lobbyist was really the thing your imagination paints when you hear the word, the coarse briber in the lobby waiting for the dishonest Congressman to come out and be tempted. There was a rush of building up new industries, each of which wanted some concession from the Government and was willing to pay for it, and each trying to get ahead of the others by bribing faster and more furiously. That accounts for the fact that most of the scandals of that time bear the names of railroad companies.

"The nation gradually got its poise, and as it sobered up from its spree Congress, which is merely a microcosm of the nation, sobered up with it. It became harder and harder for a lobbyist to make a living. The present-day lobbyist is a poor, miserable imitation of the glorious scoundrel who handed out fortunes and governed legislation. He makes his living entirely by swindling his employers."

"How does he do that?" asked Anna.

"By making them believe that he is bribing Congressmen when he isn't. He gets hold of some organization that is trying to push some piece of legislation, goes to Washington, and sends them periodical reports of the progress he is making, always coupled with the assurance that another thousand or two will enable him to put it over. Really he never sees a Congressman, except maybe to ask him what time it is or how he likes the weather; but the gulls back at home continue to send him money until they get tired, and then he looks around for a new set of dupes.

"It is a dirty kind of business,' but his victims deserve to be robbed. They think the money they send him is being spent for bribery, and they are themselves bribers in intention. I remember once when a certain association of Government employes was trying to get a bill passed raising the salaries of those who belonged to it. They employed a Tammany ex-Congressman from this city as lobbyist. He was a very well-known man, but I will disguise him by calling him Tim Carmody, which was not his real name.

"Carmody put up at a fine hotel in Washington and lived on the fat of the land. He never went near the Capitol, but every time his funds ran low he would inform the association that he was making great progress, and that a little more money would enable him to put it over. The bill, in fact, was pigeonholed in the committee room of the Senate Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, and had no chance of ever getting out. Senator Wolcott of Colorado was Chairman of that committee and ruled it absolutely.

"One week Wolcott went to New York on business, and while he was gone some member of his committee, running across this bill and not knowing that the leaders had decided it should not be reported, perfunctorily brought it up before the committee, and it went through. That is, it was reported out of the committee to the Senate, for such action as the Senate might choose to take.

"Carmody saw the item in the morning paper. He had just been coming to the conclusion that he was through. The poor devils whom he was milking had been getting restive—you see, all funds had to be raised by an assessment on these workingmen—and it didn't look as if they would stand for another touch. He had been figuring on losing his job and hunting another. But that item was his opportunity.

"He wired the association something like this: 'Have just got bill out of committee. See newspapers. All is plain sailing now if I can have another thousand. Trick must be turned between now and Tuesday. Success or failure depends on instant response.'

"So the poor dupes got together and extorted another thousand from the hard working members of the association and sent Carmody the money. He paid his hotel bill, about which he had been in some doubt, and got out. Wolcott got back from New York, moved to recommit the bill, and it went back to his committee to die the death he had intended for it. I saw Wolcott that day, and I never saw him so angry.

"'That ass on my committee,' he said, 'simply enabled that infernal villain Carmody to rob those poor wretches of another slice of their wages. Carmody, of course, will explain it to the satisfaction of his victims; he will tell them that the money wasn't enough, that I held out for a higher price, and that he did his best. What infuriates me, though, is the robbery of these poor, hard working people of money they can't afford to lose.'

"I didn't altogether agree with Wolcott. These poor, hard working people were trying to bribe Congressmen, and it seemed to me that they deserved what they got. But that's all that lobbying amounts to in these days."

"That is," said the Washington Correspondent, "lobbying by a lobbyist."

"Who but a lobbyist would lobby?" asked Anna.

"Well, I'll tell you," said the Correspondent, clearing his throat.

WENT DOWN WITH HIS GOLD.

Germany Offers Indemnity for Loss of Granados on Torpedoed Ship.

MADRID, Jan. 10.—The German Government has offered to pay to the family of Enrique Granados, the Spanish composer, 666,000 pesetas (about $130,000) as indemnity for the loss of their father.

Enrique Granados and his wife were lost in the sinking of the British cross-Channel steamer Sussex in March, 1916. Herr von Jagow, the then German Foreign Minister, expressed regret for the death of the composer in April, 1916. In June of that year a musical performance was given in New York for the benefit of the children of Señor Granados, who visited the United States late in 1915.

At the Aeolian Company, where Granados was well known, it was said that the family of the pianist has been left poorly provided for. Although he received a considerable sum for the right to produce his opera, this was lost when the Sussex sank, Granados having followed an old Spanish custom and insisted upon being paid in gold, which he carried when he sailed in a belt beneath his clothes.

It is understood that the six children of the composer have been compelled to depend largely upon the royalties received from his compositions published in this country.

Governor Edge Wants Them Protected in Right to Tax Railroads.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 10.—Governor Edge, as President of the Congress of States on Equalization of Taxation, telegraphed tonight to Vice President Marshall and Speaker Champ Clark urging upon them the importance of safeguarding the rights of States and municipalities to tax railroad properties in any law which is enacted by Congress to provide for Governmental control of railroads.

At the same time Governor Edge sent telegrams to the Governors of Maine, Georgia, and Kansas and other national offices of the State tax organization, uring them to take up the matter personally with Senators and Representatives in Congress.

SEEKING FOR PAYNE ASSETS

Real Estate Experts Try to Find Value of His City Property.

The real estate experts, Robert C. Knapp and Henry Brady, who were named as the receivers of the property of Clarence Payne, against whom involuntary petitions in bankruptcy were filed on Wednesday, began yesterday the work of discovering the value of the property Mr. Payne has in this city. So far as the facts were disclosed yesterday, Mr. Payne limited his cash investments in real estate to a fund not exceeding $1,000,000, his plan being to make a comparatively small payment on a parcel of encumbered property and then by careful management place it where it could earn a fair return on the investment and sell it at an advance. It was said that Mr. Payne neither made nor lost much money in his real estate ventures. It could not be learned yesterday whether Mr. Payne had at his command his entire fortune, said to amount ot $25,000,000, or whether the greater part of it was tied up in a trust.

It developed that Mr. Payne had invested a great deal of money in moving pictures, and that one set of pictures, which cost him $75,000, has not yet been exhibited. It was said that his moving picture investments had not been profitable. His equity in the twelve-story apartment house at 383-387 Park Avenue, which amounted to $650,000 in 1915, had dwindled, it was said, to $100,000. Besides this he has equities in the property at 140 West Seventy-ninth Street of $50,000 and in property at Woodmere, L. I., of about $53,000. His interest in the Verona apartment house at Sixty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue was estimated at $50,000. It was reported that he had bought this property from the heirs of Francis L. Leland for $800,000. Mr. Payne is now at his mother's home in Menlo Park, Cal.

AFFIRMS BUENZ CONVICTION

Court of Appeals Passes on Case of Ex-Hamburg-American Aid.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals handed down a decision yesterday affirming the conviction of Karl Buenz, ex-German Minister to Mexico, who at the outbreak of the European war, was the managing director of the Hamburg-American Line in this country, and three other former Hamburg-American officials, who were convicted more than a year ago of conspiracy to defraud the United States. The indictments charged that Buenz and his confederates filed false manifests with the United States Customs authorities in order to get supplies to German raiders then operating in the Atlantic. The other men whose convictions were affirmed were George Kotter, Adolph Hachmeister, and Joseph Poppenhaus, all subordinates of Buenz.

The false manifests which Buenz and the other plotters filed were intended to conceal the destination of the vessels, all of which it subsequently turned out were under German charter at the time, although flying neutral flags. Buenz and Kotter face terms of one and a half years each in the Federal Penitentiary. Poppenhaus's sentence was one year and one day. Hachmeister died several months after his conviction. The decision of the Court of Appeals was unanimous.

ASKS McCARTHY'S REMOVAL.

Scott Nearing Objects to Marshal's Remarks About Himself.

Scott Nearing, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the so-called People's Council of America, which has been agitating for a Bolshevist peace, has asked the Government to remove United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy of the Southern District of New York. He says that the Marshal at a meeting held recently, at which among other things the United States Constitution was referred to as "a scrap of paper," had uttered statements which tended to incite mob violence against Mr. Nearing.

As a matter of fact, what the Marshal said was that if Mr. Nearing kept on agitating along certain lines he might some day find himself in trouble, when there were no officials in calling distance to protect him.

Growing Activity in Hardware.

There has been considerable improvement in the local household hardware market since the first of the year, according to reports. During the last few days it is said that a number of retailers from many sections have been in town and seemed to be fairly anxious to get merchandise. Because of unusually low stocks in the hands of retailers and jobbers alike, much of the present buying is for quick delivery where it can be obtained. There are said to be unmistakable signs that those retailers who have been holding off for lower prices are beginning to see the folly of their position, and that many of them are now anxious to get their stocks replenished before further price advances are put into effect.

Army Socks in Big Sizes.

Not the least interesting of the orders for hosiery that have been placed to date by the United States Government is one calling for more than 200,000 pairs of mixed wool and cotton socks for colored troops, the sizes ranging from 12½ to 16½. The unusualness of the order is apparent when it is considered that, in ordinary civilian trade in these goods, the largest size called for is 12½, and that the demand for this size is not large. The order originally specified some hose of size 17, but this was dropped on the advice of the mill. The order, in pairs, is divided in this way: Size 16½, 500; 16, 500; 15½, 1,000; 15, 2,700; 14½, 2,700; 14, 23,800; 13½, 30,000; 13, 58,300, and 12½, 100,800. It is understood that shoes of corresponding size also are being made up for the Government.

Sports Skirts Good for Spring.

Judging by the nature of the Palm Beach trade, several local manufacturers of separate skirts believe the coming Spring and Summer season will be an unusually good one for sports models. It is pointed out that sports clothes of every description have been the leaders in the Southern markets this Winter, and that in all probability this vogue will come North with the warm weather. Corduroy, which is more or less new to this purpose, has been used in sports skirts by a number of manufacturers, and from all accounts has been well taken in the South. That it will prove equally popular here later on seems quite certain, and already there have been some orders placed for these goods for Spring delivery.

Printcloth Demand More Active.

There was no dearth of buying activity in the local gray goods market yesterday, from all accounts, and the business done was limited only by the unwillingness of the mills to sell for certain deliveries. The bulk of the sales put through was for delivery in the second quarter of the year, for, while buyers were seeking nearby goods as well, they were considerably harder to get. Business was reported on 39-inch 80 square for April, May, and June at 16 cents with several mills asking a quarter more for spots. The same thing was told of in regard to 39-inch 68-72s, where the respective prices were 13¾ and 14 cents. A limited business on spot 38½-inch squares was done at 12¾ cents, while 64-60s brought 12¼ and 12 cents, according to delivery. Bids of 11⅛ cents for spot 38½-inch 64-56s were reported to be fruitless. Prices closed this way for spots:

39-inch, 80-80s..	*16¼c	38½-inch, 64-60s..	12¼c

Men's Neckwear Opens Well.

Judging from the business turned in for Spring delivery by men's neckwear salesmen who are now on the road, the war and other things affecting the economic balance of the country are not going to hurt that particular industry much. While reports from certain quarters indicate that the advance orders taken so far are ahead of last year, more conservative sellers admit that they are at least up to the 1917 mark. Factors in the enlarged buying that is told of by the former are the early date on which Easter comes this year and the anxiety of the retailers to get their merchandise made up and shipped as soon as possible in anticipation of adverse traffic developments. Bright patterns and colors are being taken up well for Spring, and flat, knit, and crocheted neckwear is all selling. Sales of the last two varieties are largest in the higher-priced goods.

Jewelry Sales Were Pretty Good.

Now that practically all of the memorandum goods sent out for the recent holiday trade have been accounted for, sales of jewelry, on the whole, are found to compare quite favorably with those of the corresponding period of 1916. Buying of the more expensive goods was uneven. The Middle West and South are credited with larger purchases of this class of merchandise than in the previous year, the gain being sufficient, it is said, more than to offset any falling off there might have been in other parts of the country. Retailers who did business are already beginning to stock up again, with the result that January sales have so far made a good showing. Collections are reported to be above the average.

Combinations Still Strong.

Combinations continue to hold the centre of the stage in the local millinery trade. While most of them have been in use for some time, new ones are added almost daily. Among the latter are hats of Bangkok and hatters' plush and Bangkok and beaver. They are meant especially for wear at Winter resorts. The brim is made of white Bangkok and the crown of white hatters' plush or beaver. Some have flanges of hatters' plush in sailor shapes, large mushrooms, and roll-brim sailors, and are trimmed with draped white satin around the crown, with a tied bow on the side. Another new combination shown here is a hat of fancy straw and Dresden ribbon, made up in a turban shape. Dresden ribbon, it is remarked, has not been used for millinery for some time.

Must Not Buy Ahead.

There is a merchandise manager of a well-known Southern store of considerable size who, according to comment heard in the dry goods trade, has refused his buyers permission to place advance orders for anything in spite of warnings on all sides of rapidly approaching scarcities in many lines of merchandise. His contention is, it is said, that there is plenty of spot goods of all kinds to be had, if a buyer will take the trouble to look for them, and that this condition will continue through the rest of the war. Further than this, according to salesmen who sell to the store, this man insists that lower prices are in the offing, and predicts that by early Fall even rumors of merchandise crises will be things of the past.

Increased Underwear Sales.

Illustrating the greatly increased demand for heavy underwear for women, particularly during the last week, the buyer for one of the large department stores in this city said yesterday: "Our normal sales in women's undergarments on Saturdays amount in money to about $250. On last Saturday our total sales for the day were $940. That is an increase of very nearly 400 per cent. During December, which is always a slow month for these lines, we increased our sales by about 60 per cent. The greater volume of business we are doing in staple goods is more than enough to offset whatever minor setbacks we may have felt in some of the fancy and more or less nonessential lines."

French Designers Use Silks.

There is evident the same tendency toward the extensive use of silks in the early importations of Paris coats, suits and dresses for the coming Spring and Summer seasons which has characterized this year's domestic creations. There are many smartly tailored sports' suits and dresses in which such silks as tussah, Hindu, sylvette, and crepe de chine are employed in a number of new and striking effects. In these garments more or less straight lines have been featured. Satin and georgette crepe have been extensively used for collars and cuffs and other trimmings. The range of colors, while perhaps not as great as in former years, nevertheless includes many bright shades and brilliant combinations of colors.

Foreign Trade Convention Postponed

The Executive Committee of the National Foreign Trade Council announced yesterday that, owing to the railroad congestion and the desire of the Council to co-operate with the Government in the relief of the situation due to the war, the dates of the fifth national foreign trade convention, to be held at Cincinnati, Ohio, have been changed from Feb. 7, 8, and 9 to April 18, 19, and 20.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Gain in a Quiet Session—Surprising Increase in Steel Orders.

There was little change yesterday in the attitude of traders towards the market as reflected in the demand for stocks, and the volume of dealings fell short of half a million shares. The day's news was chiefly interesting in its bearing on the persistent undertone of peace talk which has run through all market activity for some days. Perhaps the impression made by President Wilson's outline of war aims was too vivid in the mind to allow acceptance at face value of the interesting report yesterday that Russia had concluded a separate peace with Bulgaria, and the much more important story that Germany has appealed to Sweden to act as mediator in bringing about a conference with the Allies. The bond market did reflect for some time evidence of the faith of investors in an early peace, several of the foreign issues which would be greatly benefited by termination of war selling up on a good demand. The United Kingdom of Great Britain 5½s of 1919 touched 99⅛, and the 5s sold up to 97¾. Some of the French cities 6s were also in better favor. However, the tendency as displayed in these issues was not pronounced enough to lend much support to the feeling that a peace settlement is visibly nearer.

On the Stock Exchange interest still centres largely around United States Steel. This issue sold yesterday over a range of 2½ points, closing near its best price of the day. It was helped by the Dec 31 statement of unfilled tonnage, which, for the first time in eight months showed an increase, the gain being 485,000 tons. Before the figures were published estimates had prepared traders for a decrease of about 200,000 tons. The gain was, of course, partly explainable on the ground of the inability of the corporation to make deliveries as fast as it would have taken care of orders had difficulties of transportation and fuel supply not interfered, but the statement also showed the receipt of a considerable amount of new business. Most of the industrials scored advances yesterday, these running to 2 and 3 points in many instances. Yet the market lacked initiative and was left pretty much to the uses of the professionals on the floor. It is the kind of market that fits in comfortably with the existing business and financial situation. Call money ranged between 3 per cent. and 4 per cent., with most of the day's loans bringing the higher figure.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

President Wilson's Message Proves a Strengthening Factor.

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The stock market maintained a cheerful tone today. President Wilson's message was a strengthening factor, especially in Russian issues, which were strong, the latest Petrograd news having no effect.

Speculative issues were more active, particularly Eastern Kaffirs, tin mines, and oil shares, while British American Tobacco was a leading feature on dividend announcements. Home funds and shipping shares were steadily supported.

Money was in better demand and discount rates were firmer owing to the banks buying bills.

Trading Calm on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—Trading on the Bourse today was calm. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 58f. 25c. for cash, exchange on London at 27f. 18c., and the 5 per cent. loan at 88f. 45c.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Sales of Certificates Light.

The recent offering of 4 per cent. Treasury certificates of indebtedness which mature June 25 has not met the response that had been expected. According to the latest daily Treasury statement, the sales total approximately $155,000,000. On Nov. 21 last a similar offering of certificates, having the same maturity, was made, and in a few days the subscriptions aggregated about $600,000,000. Inquiry among the banks has elicited the information that when the first offering was made no intimation had been given of subsequent issues of a June maturity, and consequently many of the institutions made generous purchases, and at present do not care to increase their holdings. The certificates have a special appeal to corporations and others who will be obliged to make heavy tax payments to the Government in June, and they afford them a desirable investment for funds set aside for the payments. The certificates will be accepted by Internal Revenue Collectors in lieu of cash.

Delivery of Liberty Loan Bonds.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington has been making considerable headway in the production and delivery of 3½ per cent., 4 per cent., and "conversion" 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds, and it is expected that before the campaign for the Third Liberty Loan is started all of the definitive bonds will have been delivered to subscribers. As soon as the bonds reach the Federal Reserve Bank of New York they are distributed promptly. The New York bank needs only several hundred million dollars' worth of bonds to complete the distribution in this district.

The Cotton Market Gets Loose.

The speculative element may have been largely eliminated from the local cotton market, but it has not been entirely eliminated, and when it does succeed in getting hold of the market in the old-fashioned way lively times are in prospect. Yesterday, for instance, the big trade and supplying interests who control the trade under present conditions apparently took a vacation for the day, and let the speculator have an inning, which he seized in a manner to indicate that he considered it long overdue. The resulting pyrotechnics in prices were edifying to behold, but with no permanent harm done—in fact, as has recently been the case when the speculative element has notably asserted itself, the net result was to leave prices rather lower than might be considered normal in view of the general state of the trade.

Speculation Unimportant.

Paradoxical as it may seem, yesterday's cotton market, with its wide fluctuations in prices, might be considered a demonstration of the comparative insignificance of the speculative element in the trade just now. When the speculators were in their glory and prices were advancing by leaps and bounds late in the afternoon, the volume of business, which, rather than price fluctuations, is the true measure of the market, was comparatively small, and there was so little depth and strength to the movement that only a few substantial offerings were sufficient to break through, send the whole flock of buyers in flight, and completely alter the aspect of affairs.

Royal Dutch Dividend.

News came by cable from Amsterdam yesterday that the Royal Dutch Petroleum Company had declared the usual dividend of this season of the year, amounting to 15 per cent. The American shares will participate to the amount of about $2 a share.

Bad Weather and Steel Earnings.

Steel company earnings in the current quarter can hardly help reflect to a substantial degree the adverse effect of January weather conditions. Where excessively low temperatures reduced operations during the first week, there is now the continuing influence of retarded railroad transportation. The report in trade periodicals this week paint a dark picture of conditions at blast furnaces and many steel mills, and it is estimated that the industry generally is working not above 60 per cent. of capacity. With the Winter period no more than well under way, one might grow pessimistic about possible slowing down of war preparations because of insufficient steel between now and Spring. It goes without question, however, that where the shortage, if there is any, will be felt first will be among private consumers. Manufacturers will alter their plans to meet conditions, concentrating even more than before on the output of products for military purposes at the expense of the less essential materials.

A Custom Broken.

Many an old-timer beside the stock ticker was disturbed yesterday at 2:15 o'clock when the words "Delivery Time" were spelled out on the tape instead of the conventional "Hammond's Time." This is the hour when all deliveries on the preceding day's transactions must be completed. For many years watches have been regulated daily in brokerage offices by the notification on the tape, and the name of the clockmaker who kept the time of day correctly for the Exchange has always been printed. Inquiry at the Exchange executive office failed to develop a reason for the change. No one knew it had been made, in fact. Presumably, the decision to break through an old custom was made somewhere in the mechanical department of the ticker service.

Willys-Overland Dividend Meeting.

Directors of the Willys-Overland Company are scheduled to meet next Monday. The reactionary tendency of the stock of late has aroused rumors that a reduction in the common stock disbursement from the present 12 per cent. level will be voted. The company is carrying heavy inventories as the result of its preparations for the manufacture of airplane motors and also because of plans for an active year in the making of automobiles. The company's need of large working capital is obvious, and at the same time it is expected that the war inventories will be liquidated rapidly during the first half of 1918.

British Notes Mature Feb. 1.

There will mature on Feb. 1 an issue of $100,000,000 of one-year 5½ per cent. secured notes of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, which will be paid at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. The Bankers Trust Company, which is the trustee, calls attention to the fact that holders of the notes who desire to convert them into twenty-year 5½ per cent. bonds, due Feb. 1, 1937, are required to give ten-days' written notice. An issue of $150,000,000 of two-year 5½ per cent. secured notes offered at the same time as were the $100,000,000 of one-year notes matures on Feb. 1, 1919, but a semi-annual interest payment amounting to $4,125,000 will be made on Feb. 1 of this year and a similar amount is due Aug. 1, 1918.

A War Time Economy

The bond department of the Equitable Trust Company has announced the details of a plan for economical co-operation among independent bond dealers and banks with bond departments throughout the country. The plan provides for the elimination of a great deal of the local machinery now necessary in the distribution of securities. It will furnish service to local dealers and banks through a central organization. It is stated that many dealers and banks have already become participants in the plan, as it meets the necessity for "shortening sail" due to war conditions and the lack of trained bond salesmen.

TO TAX STOCK DIVIDENDS.

Roper Holds Recent Decision Did Not Affect Act of Sept. 18, 1916.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Daniel C. Roper, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, issued an announcement tonight to the effect that in the absence of a court decision to the contrary the Government will carry into effect the expression of the act of 1916 for the taxation of stock dividends and paid out of earnings accrued since March 1, 1913. Commissioner Roper's announcement was made to clear away doubt as to the policy of the Treasury Department with reference to the decision of the United States Supreme Court last Monday in the case of Towne versus Eisner. Commissioner Roper's announcement follows:

"Misapprehension exists as to the effect of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Towne versus Eisner, handed down Jan. 7, 1918. In this opinion it was held that under the act of Oct. 3, 1913, a stock dividend declared by a corporation Jan. 2, 1914, was not properly regarded as income. It does not necessarily follow, however, that no stock dividends are to be held taxable under the provisions of the acts of Sept. 18, 1916, and Oct. 3, 1917.

"The act of Oct. 3, 1913, which was the only act before the court in the case, contained no provision expressly providing for treating stock dividends as income, and the decision of the court was to the effect that the act was not to be construed as taxing such dividends. The court did not decide that such dividends cannot be income within the meaning of the Sixteenth Amendment, but expressly recognized that the word "income" may have a different meaning in the statute from the meaning in the Constitution.

"The act of Sept. 8, 1916, contains an express provision taxing stock dividends declared and paid out of earnings accrued since March 1, 1913. In the absence of a decision as to the legal effect of the express provisions contained in the later acts, the Bureau of Internal Revenue naturally will continue to be governed by the express provisions of the later acts in reference to stock dividends."

Promotion for H. C. Sylvester, Jr.

Horace C. Sylvester, Jr., has been elected Vice President of the National City Company, and he will continue to have charge of the purchase and sale of State and municipal bonds for the company. Mr. Sylvester was for sixteen years associated with N. W. Halsey & Co., and when that concern was taken over by the National City Company a year ago last September he was placed at the head of the State and municipal bond department.

Northern Securities Finances

The Northern Securities Company reports total income amounting to $271,045 in 1917, derived from its holdings of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad stock. This was $14,435 less than in the preceding year, and after dividends had been paid a balance of $108,179 was added to the surplus account. The total surplus at the end of the year was $2,987,282.

STEEL BOOKINGS INCREASE.

Gain of 484,612 Tons in December Causes Surprise to Trade.

The Steel Corporation's unfilled orders gained 484,612 tons during December to a total at the end of the month of 9,381,718 tons. The showing, made public yesterday, brought considerable surprise to the trade for the reason that the persistent decline in all preceding months since April of last year had appeared to forecast another drop. Statisticians on the financial district had predicted that a recession of 200,000 tons or more could be looked for.

The corporation's inability to ship out finished goods at a maximum rate because of railroad conditions was a factor in the increase, but at the same time actual new business showed an encouraging condition during December. It is believed that now orders were filed with the various subsidiaries at a rate not far under manufacturing capacity.

Last April the corporation reported the greatest total of forward business in its history, aggregating 12,183,083 tons. With the entrance of the country into the war domestic buying began to recede, and until last month it had not displayed any noteworthy recovery. On Dec. 31, 1916, the order books contained contracts for 11,547,286 tons.

To Make Your Money Make Money

on a really profitable basis is easier today than when ordinary business conditions prevail. As a natural result of the war even the most conservative securities are selling at prices which yield returns all out of proportion to their intrinsic value.

The Resources of the United States are greater than the resources of any other warring nation. This is the richest of all countries economically, and potentially the greatest in a military sense. Can any one therefore doubt the ultimate result of the present war? It may be natural for securities to be selling at very low prices, but they cannot continue indefinitely to sell at such prices. The history of all wars justifies this conclusion.

WILD DAY FOR COTTON

Net Loss of from 47 to 55 Points After Slump, Sharp Rise and Sudden Break.

There was a rather wild market on the Cotton Exchange yesterday. After opening considerably below Wednesday's closing figures and going off even more in the early trading, prices rallied in the early afternoon, climbed rapidly amid frenzied bidding up to or, in the case of May and July, beyond Wednesday's high prices, and then in the last hour broke wildly, falling 50 points in as many minutes. The close was easy, with a net loss of from 47 to 55 points. March deliveries, for instance, sold up to 31.95c, within two points of Wednesday's high, which incidentally was the high record for the season, after 2 o'clock, and at 3 closed at 31.40c, the lowest price of the day.

The unsettled condition of the market appeared to be almost entirely a local affair, Southern markets being undisturbed by it, and Southern spot quotations, with few exceptions, being unchanged or actually higher. Moreover, beyond various unconfirmed rumors regarding the international situation, there appeared to be little in the external news to explain the nervousness of the market. The opening was from 8 to 20 points off, partly recovered at once by Liverpool and domestic trade buying, but most of this demand, it soon appeared, had already been satisfied, and the market sagged off until it was 38 to 46 points below Wednesday's close.

Some trade interests seized this opportunity, apparently, to pick up a little cotton, and just as prices were recovering a rumor spread that Germany had asked Sweden to act for her in negotiations with the Entente. Before it had been contradicted it started a wave of speculative buying. The ensuing rise was spectacular, but some heavy sales at the top demonstrated that there was no body to it whatever, and before the purchasers could liquidate their gains had crumbled away before concerted and heavy selling.

The Texas drought appears to have been broken, and this, with calmer reconsideration of the real remoteness of actual peace prospects, impelled the oldtimers to stay out of the market. The fuel scarcity in its ultimate effect upon consumption is also being anxiously studied. Exports for the day were 13,667 bales, or 2,174,038 for the season. Southern spot markets were officially reported 37 points higher to 40 points lower, generally unchanged or higher.

BANK BUYS $12,000,000 AMERICAN CAN NOTES

The First National Takes Part of Issue Designed Chiefly to Purchase Tin Plate.

The First National Bank of New York has bought from the American Can Company $12,000,000 of the company's serial notes, to be dated Jan. 21, and which will mature in equal installments in seven, eight, nine, and ten months. The notes will be offered on a 7 per cent. discount basis.

The proceeds of the notes will be used chiefly to pay for tin plate which will be converted into finished products to meet the requirements of the company's customers for the coming season, and hence the notes will be self-liquidating in character. There is a demand for short-term notes of this sort by banks and investors seeking early maturities, and these American Can Company obligations are especially attractive by reason of the fact that they are eligible for rediscount at the Federal Reserve Banks when they mature in not more than ninety days. The only requirement is that the company's financial statement must show a reasonable excess of quick assets over liabilities, a condition which the American Can can readily comply with. It is expected that banks investing in the notes will keep them in their portfolios until the due date is within ninety days, when they will offer them for rediscount in the event that they have occasion to resort to rediscounting.

The American Can Company is capitalized at $88,000,000, and it has outstanding $11,872,500 of 5 per cent. bondss. Last month the company wiped out the accumulated dividends on its 7 per cent. preferred stock. It is stated that the can company established new high records in 1917 both for volume of business and profits.

The American Can note issue is the first large industrial financing that has been undertaken since the flotation of the Liberty Loan.

6% Investments Free from Care

IN times like these, put your money in securities that free you from care, worry, and the responsibilities of vigilance and management—such as the first mortgage serial bonds, safeguarded under the Straus Plan.

THESE bonds are strongbox securities, to be locked away until maturity, except to clip their semiannual coupons. They are safeguarded against wartime conditions and they yield 6% net.

BEFORE you make your final selection for January investment, you should call at our office and discuss the merits of the Straus Plan and the Straus service with one of our officers. Or, if you prefer, write for

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

From a state of early heaviness, the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange shifted to firmness in the later dealings. Peace talk was again an important element in stimulating buying. While there was a degree of softness in the early dealings, there was no pressure of selling. Further scattered profit taking appeared to be under way, with the market inclined to mark time pending an impetus from some new source. Generally early price fluctuations were within comparatively narrow limits.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The drought in the Southwest has been partially relieved by snowfall in Kansas, which will add protection to the crop against the cold wave which was reported working down from the Northwest. There were reports that the War Board in Washington has opened negotiations with Argentina in an endeavor to bring about an exchange of American coal for Argentine wheat. Argentine shipments for the week were estimated at 370,000 bushels, against 522,000 last week and 1,114,000 last year.

Rye market steady; No. 2 Western, $1.92, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

The corn market was active, but prices were easier in sympathy with the decline in oats and influenced by persistent peace rumors. Argentine shipments for the week were estimated at 800,000 bushels, compared with 728,000 the previous week and 3,340,000 last year. In the local cash market prices were easier, kiln dried No. 3 yellow being quoted at $1.79 and No. 3 mixed at $1.75, cost, insurance, and freight, New York, prompt shipment, and Argentine corn at $195 to $2.05, cost and freight, New York to arrive.

OATS.

After showing resistance to bearish influences the oats market broke sharply toward the close under heavy selling on peace rumors. Prices declined about 2 cents a bushel from the top, but final quotations showed a partial rally, and closing prices were ⅞@1¼c net lower. Country offers were said to be larger, and while there were some evidences of export inquiry no actual business came to light. Reports from the West that an embargo had been placed against shipments to the East for domestic purposes was thought to be bearish for the Western markets, as it might bring about some accumulation. The domestic cash situation, however, was strong and higher on expectations of light receipts here; standard quoted at [illegible]½c; No. 2 white, 96¼c; No. 3 white, 96c; No. 4 white, 95½c; fancy clipped white, 96@9[illegible]c; ordinary clipped white, 95@96c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Unexpectedly large receipts of hogs at Chicago, with lower prices at the yards, caused an easier tone to the provision market early. The selling, however, was not of great volume, and subsequently the market rallied and the close was firm on peace rumors. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 60,000; estimated for Friday, 40,000. Kansas City received 18,000 and Omaha 12,000 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was again dull and prices were nominal. Operations consisted of 600 barrels from January to March at 25 to 30 points difference. There were also tenders of 1,700 barrels on January contracts, and this had the effect of giving the market an easier undertone for the near positions. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was active yesterday, with fluctuations irregular and sentiment more or less unsettled. There was a renewal of liquidation at the opening, and after starting at a decline of 9 to 12 points, active months sold about 20 to 25 points under Wednesday's closing figures. A renewal of peace rumors then seemed to stimulate fresh buying or covering by recent sellers for a reaction, and March advanced from 7.95c to 8.30c, while September sold up from 8.48c to 8.87c or about 11 to 16 points net higher. Reactions followed under further realizing, with the close unsettled, net 2 points lower to 1 point higher. The local spot market was unsettled, with Rio grades lower at 8½c for 7s, while Santos coffees were unchanged on the basis of 10⅝c for 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The local market for raw sugar was unchanged at 4.985c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.005c for centrifugal, but trading was more active, which would seem to indicate that the freight situation was a little better. There were sales of 800,000 bags of Cubas to the committee at 4.985c, cost and freight, for prompt shipment and January loading, equal to 6.005c for centrifugal.

No improvement was noted in the refined situation, although with the increased amount of raw sugar now sold to the committee, it is expected that refiners will soon be in a better position to accept business in refined. Three of the leading refiners were accepting limited orders at 7.45c for fine granulated, with two still out of the market entirely.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 3,060 packages. Prices were fully recovered, the choice and fancy grades of fresh table goods advancing with a firm feeling. Medium qualities were steady. The stock cleaned up pretty closely, and fresh goods were coming in slowly. Ladles and packing stock in sellers' favor. THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The extreme Southwest disturbance of Wednesday night is dissipating in that vicinity, but an offshoot has moved to extreme Southern Texas with a considerable increase in intensity, while the Western high area and accompanying cold wave have extended into Northwestern Texas, Amarillo tonight reporting a temperature of 2 degrees below zero, while in the Canadian Northwest temperatures as low as 30 below zero were reported.

There were also general snows over Central and Northern districts from the Mississippi River to the Rocky Mountains and rains in the West Gulf States. Elsewhere the weather was fair, except in New York and Northern New England, where there were light snows, and in extreme Western Montana, Northern Idaho, and Washington, where there were snows and rains.

There will be rain Friday or Friday night in the South Atlantic States, probably turning to snow in Georgia and the Carolinas by Saturday. There will also be rain, turning to snow, in the East Gulf States and snow in Tennessee, the Ohio Valley, and the south upper lake region, followed by generally fair weather Saturday. In the lower lake region there will be scattered snows Friday and Saturday, while in the Middle Atlantic States and New England fair weather Friday will be followed by snow Saturday.

It will be colder Friday in Mississippi and Tennessee, with a cold wave at night that will extend by Saturday morning through Alabama, Northwestern Florida, and Western Georgia. It will also be colder Saturday in the Carolinas, Eastern Georgia, and Northern and Central Florida, and somewhat colder Friday night and Saturday in the Ohio Valley and the lower lake region.

Cold wave warnings have been ordered for the lower Missouri Valley, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Eastern Texas, Tennessee, the East Gulf States, and Western Georgia.

Advisory southeast storm warnings issued at 10:30 P. M., Cedar Keys to Bay St. Louis. Disturbance of marked character over extreme South Texas, moving east-northeast, which will cause strong southeast to south winds Friday, shifting to much colder west and northwest Friday afternoon and night.

Winds for Friday and Saturday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate west, becoming variable, fair; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate variable, becoming easterly, snow by Saturday morning; South Atlantic Coast, moderate east to southeast, increasing by Friday night with rain.

CALL LIBERTY MOTOR BEST IN THE WORLD

Experts Say It Will "Do" 50 Horse Power Better Than the Rolls-Royce.

ALLIES ORDER SOME BUILT

Major Vincent Tells Automotive Engineers Its Possibilities Are Still Unfathomed.

American airplanes will go into the fighting on the battle fronts of Europe this year equipped with a motor "fully as good, if not better, than any that is now being built," according to speakers at the final session of the annual meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, which was held yesterday afternoon at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street. The topic as stated on the program, "Reasons Behind the Liberty Aircraft Engine," gave plentiful room for discussion at all points, and the three addresses were followed by half an hour of questions from the floor, which were answered by Major Jesse G. Vincent, formerly Vice President of the Packard Motor Company, who, with Major Hall of the Hall-Scott Company, was called into the reserve engineering service last July and designed the Liberty motor.

The account of performance and production possibilities given by the speakers seemed to bring general satisfaction, but what put the final touch on the general conviction, apparent among most of the engineers, that the Liberty motor was actually living up to its promises, was the statement made at the close of the discussion that several of the allied Governments have placed orders in this country for the motors.

Much information about production had to be withheld for military reasons, and figures as to the actual speed which the motor will develop were not given for the reason that the designers of the engine were careful to point out that the planes themselves are a very important factor in this consideration. But the following points as to the Liberty motor were brought out in the course of the afternoon's discussion:

Best Engineering Talent.

1. The primary consideration in design was the meeting of the known possibilities of production by American factory methods. Certain features of foreign engines, the building of which required highly specialized factory technique such as was not compatible with quantity production would be impossible for use in the enormous number of airplanes which is contemplated by the American aircraft program. The designers had to consider the present capacities of production in American factories by American methods, as well as the possibilities of increase.

2. All the engineering talent in the American airplane and automobile industries was placed at the disposal of the Government, so that when Majors Vincent and Hall settled down to the completion of the design they had available all the information possessed by American manufacturers and the researches previously made by some forty or fifty other engineers. The motor which resulted is said by those who were engaged in its design to combine the best points of all motors hitherto designed in America.

3. Although the possibility of production was the first desideratum, it is asserted that the Liberty motor is as good as, if not better, than any foreign engine now being built. When the work of designing the new motor was just begun the allied Governments were asked for suggestions from the engines now in use in their aircraft. All of the major allies replied that they were severally engaged in developing a new and better motor. In consequence, with the aid of such suggestions from allied sources as were of use and those contributed by the American engineers, the designers set to work to build an engine which should embody all the improvements likely to be thought of abroad during the period of design and construction. They feel confident that when the Liberty motors are actually in use on the western front there will be no foreign motor of equal worth in use.

4. Liberty motors are now being turned out and American airplanes are being equipped with them every day. When the tide of production is in full swing they will be wholly standardized, but at present while standardization is in effect with regard to most parts a few must for a little time to come be made individually because the master gauges are not ready for all factories.

5. Although it was not definitely taken up in the meeting, it was declared afterward by the Chairman, Charles M. Manly, Vice President of the society, chief inspecting engineer of the Curtiss Aeroplane and Motor Company, and a member of the National Aircraft Standards Board, that every possible provision is being made for the improvement of the design with the least possible interference with production. Airplanes are rapidly being improved of course by the interchange of captured machines with new devices between the opposing armies, but the men who are in charge of the Government's aircraft program are said to feel that the system of production will make it possible to introduce new features or improvements on later lot orders so that the Government will never be tied up with a great number of obsolescent machines in process of manufacture.

Later, Major Vincent declared he believed that with all the alterations that might be necessitated by subsequent experience, 95 per cent. of the present features of the Liberty Motor would be retained.

6. "Many thousands" of Liberty motors will be turned out in the year 1918, and American factories will be able to produce at least twice as many per week as they would be able to manufacture of any foreign type of engine.

Used in Every Type of Air Machine.

The Liberty motor is to be used on machines of every type—speed scouts, battle planes, observation and bombing machines, and seaplanes, though those at present in process of manufacture, according to Major Vincent, are intended only for heavy battle and bombing planes.

At the dinner of the automotive industries last night, however, Major Vincent said: "I don't think we'll ever do much in this country for the production of single-seated fighting machines. They are like racing cars, and racing cars are best developed beside the track."

There are only two varieties—a high-pressure engine for the use of battleplanes at very high altitudes, where the atmosphere is rarified, and a low-pressure motor for the use of seaplanes working principally in the detection of submarines, and hence near sea level, where the air pressure is heavy. As showing the endurance of the motor it was said that the high-pressure engine designed for use three or four miles in the air had been run consecutively for eight hours at sea level without showing any weakness. In the vacuum chamber of the Bureau of Standards in Washington, where conditions of temperature and air pressure obtaining 35,000 feet in the air—two miles higher than any aviator has ever flown—can be simulated, the high-pressure Liberty motor has been run for fifty consecutive hours. This, of course, is longer than any possible flight, for no airplane could carry enough gasoline.

The new Liberty engine will develop something more than 400 horse power at 1,625 revolutions per minute, the highest number possible with the present propeller design. Incidentally it may be remarked that improvements in the propeller are part of the plan of inventors now working on the improvement of the engine. It weighs about 800 pounds. All the motors are twelve-cylindered, with two spark plugs to each cylinder.

Questions from the floor were aimed at a comparison of this with the Rolls-Royce motor, regarded as one of the best of foreign design. Major Vincent said that the Rolls-Royce, with a weight of 950 pounds, had never authentically developed more than 360 horse power. Some one asked if it were not true that the Rolls-Royce could really do better than that. "I don't know," he said, "but I do know that the Liberty motor can do fifty horse power better than the Rolls-Royce. As a matter of fact, the Liberty motor has possibilities which have not been completely fathomed as yet. We have something up our sleeve."

The average of only two pounds weight per horse power, according to Major Vincent, was something that Continental designers had desperately tried for and failed. The Hispano-Suiza motor, used in the best French machines and made to some extent in this country, weighs two and a half pounds per horse power.

H. M. Crane, who as chief engineer of the Wright-Martin Company is manufacturing the Hispano-Suiza motors in this country, followed Major Vincent and corroborated his statement that the Liberty motor was best adapted to American production. "It will answer for all the requirements of the war," he said, "and after the war will be a factor in the remaking of the whole automotive industry. We have to begin to think now of what we are going to do after the war is over."

The first speaker of the afternoon was Colonel V. F. Clark, head of the section of experiment and design of the Army Aviation Service. He presented the general problems of aerial warfare as they are presented to American aviators and manufacturers today, and asserted that if America got sufficient aerial superiority to send out a fleet of 500 bombing machines to destroy Germany's lines of communication there would not be much left of the war.

Five papers were scheduled on "reasons behind the United States war truck designs," but on account of lack of time the only one read was a study of the chassis of the new Liberty truck by Cornelius T. Myers of Detroit. Reasons for particulars of the designs were given in considerable technical detail, and it was asserted that the new truck, particularly in the heavy size, rated as three-ton by the Government but equivalent to the commercial five-ton truck, was not only better for war purposes than any other truck in use but would be of great commercial value for heavy hauling after the war.

At the morning session the report of the Standardization Committee was adopted with some few exceptions, and the standardization of parts in the aircraft industry has now been worked out to practical completion. Officers of the society were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

President—C. F. Kettering, Dayton, Ohio; Vice Presidents—David Beecroft, New York City; C. C. Hinkley, Detroit; George H. Houston, New York City; Major Fred Glover, Washington; Henry R. Sutphen, New York City, and H. R. Brate, Lakemont, N. Y. Members of the Council—Charles S. Crawford, Charles M. Manly, and J. V. Whitbeck. Treasurer—Charles B. Whittelsey.

Aircraft Program Vast.

The convention of the Society of Automotive Engineers closed with an automotive industries dinner at the Biltmore last night, at which Howard E. Coffin, Chairman of the Aircraft Production Board, was the chief speaker. He outlined the aircraft program of America and told of the progress made so far, after repeating certain criticisms widely spread. One of these dealt with an alleged shortage of mechanicians. Regarding this, Mr. Coffin said that while he could not give figures he could give his personal assurance that there was no shortage of personnel.

"Sooner or later," he said, "and sooner than a good many of you think, we are going to have more men in the aviation service than there were in the army and navy combined a year ago."

In referring to attacks made upon members of the Advisory Commission or committees of the Council of National Defense in regard to the placing of contracts, he said: "I don't think you realize the sources of much of this criticism. I don't think people outside of Washington can realize the activities going on throughout the country to discredit our preparation, to make the people doubt the capacity and in many cases the honesty of the men to whom public duties have been assigned.

"I can assure you that from two years' close association with this work and one year of close association with men called to Washington to serve in an official or semi-official capacity I have yet to see a single instance in which I felt the faintest suspicion of the honesty of a man's action or of the honesty of the advice which he gave to the Government. In view of the scandals which arose in the war of 1898 I am sure you will agree that we have made a step in advance.

"I do not say that mistakes have not been made, but I do say that but for the fortunate creation of the Council of National Defense, which for the first time in its history provided this country with a channel through which the industrial brains of the nation could be mobilized for the service of the Government, our military program would have ended in something near disaster. This body alone tided us over the period of chaos during the transition from a peace basis to a war basis. If this is true, then these men have done the greatest work which they could ever do, and an opportunity has been afforded to the military departments to reorganize on the basis necessary to combat the industrial machine of the enemy countries built up over the last fifty years."

GERMAN PLOT HERE AGAIN FRUSTRATED

PLANNED WIDE SABOTAGE

Anti-War Propaganda Also Aim of Concerted Movement—Some Americans Suspected.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Through intercepted communication and evidence found on a score or more of arrested aliens Government agents have discovered a concerted movement to reorganize German sabotage and anti-war propaganda in this country. The movement was broken up and enemy activities now are believed to be confined to sporadic cases carried on largely by pro-German sympathizers without guidance from a central headquarters.

This was disclosed today by Government officials, who declined, however, to give all the details surrounding a series of measures recently taken to prevent the rebuilding of a unified enemy spy system. It is known that about thirty Germans and a few Scandinavians have been arrested on suspicion of complicity in the new plot. The Germans have been interned and the Scandinavians sent out of the country. Some Americans are under suspicion and are being closely watched.

The evidence gathered in the round-up indicated that a few leaders whose identity has not been disclosed, but who are believed to be neutral subjects, tried to communicate with a number of agitators located mainly in Eastern seaports, in industrial centres and in the extreme West, to develop co-operation among them.

Sabotage was to be conducted systematically and propaganda for peace, or dissemination of pessimistic war reports, was to be stimulated under direction of a recognized head. There were indications also that the headquarters was to gather bits of information from all parts of the country and forward it to Germany through a North European neutral by code communications carried by members of ship crews or other means.

Hundreds of self-appointed spies now are believed to be at work in the United States, but officials say they do not worry much about them. Many are said to be members of the Industrial Workers of the World, which has carried on organized destruction under stimulation in some cases, the Government charges, with German money. Fires and explosions which have occurred recently are said to be the work of individual cranks or paranoiacs, probably pro-German in their sympathies, but without direction of a master organization.

Many spy suspects caught recently have been found to carry plans of fortifications, drawings of airplane or truck parts, railroad maps showing bridges and other important points, plats of industrial centres and shipbuilding plants. Although the danger of allowing this information to reach the enemy, particularly when a multitude of details might be assembled into a significant whole, is not minimized by officials, it is felt that many of these persons are acting individually, hoping to sell the information to some enemy interest. In the case of several of these men caught in an attempt to leave the country on neutral ships Inspectors became convinced that they were only adventurers, and not paid spies.

It was officially stated today that the several investigating agencies of the Government were now co-operating closely in running down dangerous persons. The Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice works jointly with the Army Intelligence Service, and the Navy Intelligence agents and Customs Inspectors are working harmoniously. The long-standing so-called "friction" between the Secret Service proper and the Bureau of Investigation is said to have been allayed to a great extent under W. H. Moran, the new Secret Service Chief.

Fargo; E. M. Williams, Vice President Southern Express Company; William M. Barrett, President Adams Express Company; C. W. Stockton, Vice President and General Counsel of the Wells Fargo Company; R. C. Alston, General Counsel, Southern; P. B. Harrison, General Counsel, Adams and American Express Companies.

While there was no official statement from the Fuel Administration today, it was understood that the Federal officials believed the problem of supplying sufficient anthracite coal for the New York City district was largely a local one. It was reiterated that there was plenty of coal at New Jersey terminals to meet immediate requirements, and that the task of unloading and transporting it to New York was one which the Fuel Administration could not be expected to handle.

Arrangements had been made, it was said, for sending further supplies which would reach the terminals before New York had eaten up the supply now on hand there on cars. Emphasis was laid on the fact that priority orders could not be granted and that they would only result in a jam at the terminals, because of the slowness with which coal was being unloaded there, that would further complicate the transportation congestion there.

"I think this particular step was inevitable," Mr. Turnbull said, referring to the President's recent action. He explained that, in his opinion, some sort of a Government guarantee has been unavoidable since 1910, when the railroads lost their power to fix their own rates and "do what every business man can do—look out for the future."

Mr. Trumbull maintained that not only was the future credit of the railroads at stake but Government finance as well, and that whatever computation is made should be on the basis of property taken over at the time it was taken. He said the railroads of the country had invested $934,000,000 in their properties from June 30, 1915, to Dec. 31, 1917, and should be compensated for that expenditure.

WIGGIN AGAIN ASKS FOR MORE COAL HERE

Wires Garfield That the Situation Is Serious and That Receipts Are Decreasing.

Albert H. Wiggin, State Fuel Administrator, yesterday repeated his plea to National Fuel Administrator Garfield for coal for the relief of New York. Figures given out by the railroads showed no material increase in the amount of coal arriving here. Receipts, according to the Fuel Administrator, are only half of the amount required. Due to the blocking of South Amboy by ice, the coaling of ships was further delayed. Railroads reported that they had plenty of cars at the coal mines. Mr. Wiggin yesterday sent the following telegram to Dr. Garfield:

> Situation continues just as serious. Searles gives me the following figures on bituminous: Twenty-one cars less received than have been dumped during the last twenty-hours; total dumped yesterday, 30,000 tons. This is about one-half of the needs of this port. Anthracite figures for the last twenty-four hours show 35,000 tons dumped. One-quarter of this is for New England ports. This gave New York only 26,000 tons. Its requirements are 45,000 tons per day. We are reliably informed shipments of anthracite to Canada are continuing in amounts equivalent to last year's tonnage, with percentage for increased production. We are not informed that the situation in Canada is as desperate as it is here. While we have great sympathy with our Canadian neighbors, we do not think New York should be discriminated against. If shipments to Canada could be curtailed it would greatly relieve the situation here.

The daily report given out from Mr. Smith's office showed the following tide-water coal situation:

	Anthracite.	Bituminous.	Total.
Dumped into pockets	43,800	33,450	77,250
In barges	27,200	28,400	55,600
In cars at yards	147,550	81,150	228,700

The report said there were in transit for New York 1,572 cars, with 78,600 tons, within twenty-four hours and 117 cars, with 45,850 tons, within forty-eight hours. The totals for Wednesday showed 80,200 tons dumped, 38,030 tons in barges, with 233,000 in cars in yards. The railroad report for New England yesterday showed that 398 cars were delivered in New England up to 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Movement of coal was further hindered by the breaking down of the dumping machinery at Port Reading. The Fuel Administration reported last night that it was still out of order, and that no coal was coming from that terminal.

Mayor Hylan made a tour of the Bronx yesterday and reported he had found 125,000 tons of coal stored there.

Robert E. Livingston of the Consolidated Gas Company, of which the Central Union Gas Company is a subsidiary, said last night that the Mayor was mistaken about the amount of coal he found. He said the supply was not more than 12,000 tons and that that was being drawn on every day.

Reeve Schley, County Fuel Administrator, last night said:

"We have figures of the coal supplies of every public utility company in the city and know exactly where they are. We are convinced that none of them is in excess of the actual need of these utilities."

Mayor Hylan earlier in the day sent a letter to Mr. Schley taking exception to the latter's statement that the 10,000 tons of coal the Mayor found in the yard of the Washburn Wire Works was not fit for home use and was mostly slate and dirt. The Mayor said that the coal was fit for use in public schools.

In a reply last night Mr. Schley said that the coal had already been offered for use and declined, and if the Mayor would find anybody who wanted to use the coal, he would see that they got it.

Mr. Wiggin last night said that he had only made one rule to follow and that was to serve hospitals first. The situation was a national one and not a local one, he asserted, and declared that he thought it was up to Dr. Garfield to make out a list of non-essential industries and to order certain businesses to cease using coal. He added, however, that if the situation became so grave that there was danger of the hospitals shutting down he might take steps to close places of amusement early in the evening. What amusement places he had in mind he would not say.

Mr. Schley said that the Government had commandeered the old Weehawken Ferry from Forty-second Street, Manhattan, to Weehawken, for the use of the army. This action cuts off a means of coal wagons plying between New York and New Jersey. The New York Central Railroad announced that the old ferry of the West Shore road had been reopened for the use of the coal dealers.

FAVORS TAX INCREASE FOR J. D. ROCKEFELLER

Mayor Hylan Wants Personal Assessment Raised to Lighten Burden on Real Estate.

The wealthy men of the city, and particularly John D. Rockefeller, should pay more taxes on their personal property, according to Mayor Hylan. In a letter to Jacob A. Cantor, the new President of the Tax Department, the Mayor suggested yesterday that the personal tax assessments be increased in order to lighten the burden on real estate. In his letter the Mayor said:

> You are expected to equalize taxation in this city. I am informed that because of various amendments and exceptions to the personal property tax law the bulk of personal property in this city escapes taxation. In consequence real estate bears an undue share of the burdens of government. Personal property should bear a larger share, and it is for you to redetermine what should come within the scope of personal property for taxation. The burden on real estate must be lightened and all wealth made to bear an equal share of the cost of city government. Small property owners are losing their equities because of excessive taxation and a depression in real estate values.
> You may recall that the Tax Assessor in Cleveland, Ohio, levied on John D. Rockefeller to the extent of $400,000,000 personal wealth. Mr. Rockefeller escapes taxation in Cleveland on the ground that he lives here. Here he pays on $5,000,000 personal property. Do you not think this assessment should be increased? The Federal Government levies heaviest on the largest incomes and an extra tax on excess profits. Do you not think excessive wealth, which comes from excessive income, should also be taxed heaviest for city purposes?

The Mayor announced no appointments yesterday, but it became known for the first time that on Jan. 2 Robert W. Hebberd had been appointed Secretary of the Child Welfare Board. Mr. Hebberd was Commissioner of Charities under Mayor McClellan and later Secretary of the State Board of Charities. He has been active in obtaining State legislation creating the boards of child welfare all over the State. The new position pays $3,000 a year.

FOR CONTROL OF OIL.

M. L. Requa Made Head of New Fuel Administration Division.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The organization of an oil division of the Fuel Administration, of which M. L. Requa, a Vice President of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, is to be the head, was announced today.

A definite program of action will be adopted as soon as the Fuel Administration obtains a ruling concerning its powers. Under the Food Control act the words "fuel and fuel oil" are employed and the Attorney General may be called upon to determine whether this wording covers kerosene and gasoline.

FREIGHT JAMS PORTS; SHIPS CAN'T SAIL

shown in a canvass made on Dec. 12. This was the result of the system put into effect in the middle of December of forcing shippers of supplies to furnish proof that they would be able to have their supplies moved from port terminals before they were allowed to make shipments.

These reports also show that in any movement to clean up congestion at the Atlantic ports it is the Government, which has charge of shipments to the other Allied nations, which must move its freight, rather than the business men of America. Of the more than 40,000 carloads of freight waiting export, only 10,000 carloads are "commercial," that is, shipped by American business men to foreign customers. The fact that there is a smaller percentage of this commercial freight than of Government freight dumped on the ground also shows where there has been most delay.

What can be accomplished by American private shippers in the cleanup week which begins on Monday is shown by the fact that about 11,500 cars of domestic freight are held up in New York territory. This freight is distributed by carloads as follows, as of Jan. 5:

A canvass as of Jan. 8 showed that there was held in cars at New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Newport News Government freight to the amount of 1,965 carloads in cars and 310 carloads on piers or in warehouses. More than 800 carloads of this was held at Newport News.

The shortage of facilities for the shipment of Government freight has resulted in holding up a number of lighters. On Jan. 4 there were at New York 43 lighters loaded with Government freight which has been delayed on an average of 7 2-5 days. Some of these lighters had been put out of active use for as long as 12 days by Government handling.

Shipments of Grain.

A report on the grain situation as of yesterday showed that five Eastern roads were holding 4,402,214 bushels of grain, as follows: New York Central, 1,899,831 bushels; Lehigh, 679,000 bushels; Pennsylvania, 85,973 bushels; Erie, 287,410 bushels, and Lackawanna, 1,500,000 bushels. In addition these roads held 239 cars on hand and had 645 cars of grain in transit.

Freight Dumped on the Meadows.

It was asserted yesterday by a railroad official that for three miles out of Hoboken on the New Jersey meadows were thousands of tons of Government freight, which had been dumped on the ground because there was no warehouse room for it and because the cars in which it was standing were needed. On one day one railroad entering New York territory dumped on the ground 535 carloads of Government freight. Whereas there are now 30,000 carloads of Allied Government freight awaiting export, there were last June 6,844 carloads of the same freight at Atlantic ports.

Railroad men assert that the greatest factor in causing the congestion at Atlantic ports and creating the situation in which the Government deemed it necessary to take over the roads was the handling of Government freight. This situation became grave in November. It was the custom, railroad men said, for supplies for inland camps to be taken from Jersey terminals to Governors Island and transshipped from there, in many cases being ferried back to New Jersey terminals. In addition, the facilities at Governors Island were called inadequate to handle even a part of the freight consigned to the Depot Quartermaster's warehouses there. Often, it was reported by railroad men, it took twelve days to transport freight from Hoboken to Governors Island. In one report made on the situation it was said that delay at Governors Island was chronic. It was in response to this situation that in the last six weeks of 1917 an embargo was put on all freight consigned to the Depot Quartermaster at New York.

This situation, with the taking over of the Bush Terminals in Brooklyn and the Manhattan waterfront on the North River from Forty-eighth Street to Fifty-second Street by the War Department, and the construction of more than a score of warehouses on Governors Island and offer a relief to this condition. Delays in the deliveries of Government freight, however, railroad men say, went a long way toward causing the present congestion at this port. As far back as Dec. 20 there were standing at New York Harbor terminals 1,062 cars consigned to the Depot Quartermaster here and 141 cars consigned to the transport service. The situation with regard to the Depot Quartermaster's department was relieved in December by the operation of the railroads' embargo against Government freight. There has also been a revision of the system, whereby less freight is forced to pass through the Quartermaster's depot here.
